WHAT PHYSICIANS SAY

—ABOUT THE—

STARR KIDNEY PAD.

Treatment by Absorption has for some time been recognized by Medical Men to be the most simple and effectual means of conveying to diseased organs "Curatives," but in cases of Kidney Disease, and Complaints attending thereon, successful treatment was practically impossible until the introduction of the Starr Kidney Pad. It costs less than a single prescription and is immeasurably more decisive and effectual than any quantity of internal Medicinal dosing. Worn immediately over the seat of disease, its curative properties become absorbed by the diseased and enfeebled organs, continuously and directly, as required insure in return their healthy action and original vigour. It is comfortable to the patient and pleasant in its effects, and cures when nothing else can. The Starr Kidney Pad accomplishes positive, decisive results. A more valuable discovery as a true remedy for Kidney Diseases was never made.—Medical Gazette.

GENERAL KEER'S

REMOVAL.

THE EXPRESS is now settled in quarters, Symington block, two of P. Slaven & Co.'s. The premises larger, more convenient and more located than the old. The equipment of THE EXPRESS establishment is not to none of the town printing offices in the province.

A large quantity of new material added to the job department, making it one of the best in the district. We have facilities for doing all classes of printing, the largest colored poster to the card, in the best possible manner and at prices as low as the lowest. We solicit your patronage.

The newspaper department has received attention. We hope in a short time to introduce in THE EXPRESS new features which will tend to increase its circulation and make it still more worthy of the attention of the public. We ask our friends to lend their kind efforts in extending the circulation of the paper. We want an additional four hundred subscribers by the next, and if those who have taken an interest in getting new subscribers in the past will only exert themselves a few weeks this number can easily be reached.

CHURCH NOTES.—Last Sabbath day appointed for holding mission vices in the C. M. Church, we went away thither with the multitude. gratation was at first somewhat disarranged in not seeing Rev. Mr. Leach, of Ode is sick) in the pulpit, but we are certain all who heard Rev. Wm. Briden, then in charge, were amply repaid for a temporary disappointment. His sermon logical, forcible, and delivered with earnestness. The point which he impressed was that no nation without God has found out that there is forgiveness for sin. The choir rendered music in an accustomed skilful manner, and even of an intellectual character was demonstrated the meeting a success. . . . On evening the missionary speech was given by Rev L. N. Beaudry. Mr. Beaudry one of the ablest speakers we have heard some time. His sermon on Sunday was listened to with the deepest interest for one hour and a quarter by the audience that we have seen in the for some time. The collections and donations amounted to $132, with several rich men of the community to be heard. . . . The Methodists have purchased a bell for their church at a cost of $11; steeple is nearly completed—in fact are the "go ahead" people of the town.
BIBLE SOCIETY.—Rev. Dr. Hodgson was to have delivered the annual Bible Society lecture did not put in an appearance on account of the poor success with last year.

SAVED ARMY.—The Saved Army operations last Wednesday. They are making fair progress, but they will need forth all their energy, for there are sinners in the 'Burgh that don't come without prayer and fasting.

TEMPERANCE.—Mr. Flynn, an able and perceptive orator, delivered his celebrated address, "War vs. Whiskey," in the Hall. The audience was very attentive. He unfolded the expenses of war and the Sultan's harem. We also had the celebrated choir of the 'Burgh, a very enjoyable time. Mr. Farley occupied the chair, and at the close of the address presented the compliments of the audience to the speaker.

—It would be difficult to find a town the Dominion of its size that is better than the 'Burgh with every kind of amusement calculated to promote the

SERIOUS RAILWAY COLLISION.

A Passenger Train Runs into a Gravel Train Near Madoc—Several Persons Injured.

BELLEVILLE, Oct. 27.—A serious accident occurred on the Grand Junction Railway this morning, the Madoc train running into a gravel train near Foxboro', about seven miles from the city. Mrs. Wright, of Ma- doc, is reported to be dying from her injur- ies. Another passenger is reported as be- ing seriously hurt, and several others have sustained injuries more or less serious, but not dangerous. The collision was owing to a curve, in the bend of which the gravel pit is situated. The ballast train had slackened speed to go into the siding, when the pas- senger train, coming from the opposite di- rection, dashed into in at a high rate of speed. The passenger train was in charge of John Snyder and the ballast train was under the control of David Hays, an old and experienced conductor. The regular pas- senger train from the west left Madoc on time and, it is asserted, left the North Hastings Junction without orders. The re- sult was that seven cars in the ballast train were smashed, two engines were put in a sadly dilapidated condition, and other minor consequences followed to the rolling stock. The engines (No. 164, driven by Muir, and No. 23, driven by McKnight) formed a part of the wreck, the equal of which has not been seen on this road since its opening. The cars of the ballast train were literally smashed into splinters. The casualties are as follows: John Taylor, brakeman, of Belleville, sustained a fracture of the right hip, and was otherwise danger- ously hurt; Hiram Phillips, of El Dorado, had his head badly hurt. one of his hips was injured, and two ribs fractured, and Mrs. Wright, of Madoc, was badly injured about the back; her condition is serious. Nearly all the other passengers were severely shaken up, one being thrown through a win- dow and a knife penetrating the hand of an- other. Physicians were summoned and Dr. Burdett, of Belleville, and Dr. Faulkner of Foxboro', responded. The wounded were taken to a farm house near by and attended to by the doctors, and were brought here on a special which had been sent to the scene of the disaster. An auxilliary was sent from here with a number of men, who were throughout the day engaged in clearing the debris and putting the cars on the track. The damage done, it estimated, will be in the vicinity of $20,000.

—Another grand hunting expedition has been arranged by and made under the auspices of Mr. A. P. Wickware which will eclipse all previous ones for a long time, being more elite and more elaborately supplied with luxuries. Discrimination is so nice that even "Jim's" services are disposed of, though prepared to do the "setting." All necessities were sent up on the 27th ult. to Wolf Lake, the hunting grounds. Among the privileged number are Messrs. A. Dulmadge and G. Corby, of Belleville.

—On account of some arrangements in the firm the last of the Gilmore lumber camps (J. McCaw's) got notice to quit, and on Monday the men were paid off, discharged and started for Madoc, leaving in a noisy manner. It is rumored quite a few camps will shortly be established and the lumber business carried on quite extensively.

—Mrs. F. Beausoiliel and son returned on the 16th from Prince Edward County, where they have been visiting friends for several days. Mrs. Beausoiliel's mother, Mrs. Annie Clark, who resides with her son, Mr. Geo. Clark, is very feeble, being now in her declining years. The aged lady being one of the descendants of the brave U. E. Loyalists, had much experience in the early Muir, and No. 23, driven by McKnight) formed a part of the wreck, the equal of which has not been seen on this road since its opening. The cars of the ballast train were literally smashed into splinters. The casualties are as follows: John Taylor, brakeman, of Belleville, sustained a fracture of the right hip, and was otherwise dangerously hurt; Hiram Phillips, of El Dorado, had his head badly hurt. One of his hips was injured, and two ribs fractured, and Mrs. Wright, of Madoc, was badly injured about the back; her condition is serious. Nearly all the other passengers were severely shaken up, one being thrown through a window and a knife penetrating the hand of another. Physicians were summoned and Dr. Burdett, of Belleville, and Dr. Faulkner of Foxboro, responded. The wounded were taken to a farm house nearby and attended to by the doctors, and were brought here on a special which had been sent to the scene of the disaster. An auxilliary was sent from here with a number of men, who were throughout the day engaged in clearing the debris and putting the cars on the track. The damage done, it estimated, will be in the vicinity of $20,000.

Mrs. Wright, who was injured in the accident on the Grand Junction Railway, was taken to her home in Madoc on Wednesday. The others who were hurt are recovering. An investigation into the cause of the collision is now being made by the railway authorities.

HOW SIR JOHN CAME TO BE UNSEATED.

The Whole Thing Explained by an "Ardent Admirer" in Chicago.

An ardent admirer of Sir John Macdonald was recently asked while in Chicago how it was that the Prime Minister of Canada came to be unseated for bribery, at the same time observing that the election trials disclosed a state of corruption here that would be a source of envy in a South American State. The ardent Tory replied that Sir John Macdonald was returned for two constituencies; that he had in Parliament but one vote; that his extraordinary popularity had thus become a source of weakness to his party. There was no provision under our law by which he could resign either, and it became necessary that some act should be done by which he could get rid of one seat. A sham suit was entered. Bribery by a friend was confessed, and that one seat was got rid of. The whole proceeding was a kind of legal fiction—as much so as the proceeding by fine and recovery. This gentleman is a very ardent friend of Sir John Macdonald, and he is entitled to some reward for his explanation.

The Difference between the Two Cases.

In Lennox it was proven under oath that Mr. Roe gave out two and five dollar notes indiscriminately, while others were equally active in disbursing money in the interest of Sir John. In West Middlesex it was not proven that one dollar changed hands on account of a vote, the only thing proved being that a man promised to buy two votes, but Mr. Ross's committee refused to entertain the proposal.

Full Text of the Great African Letter—Friendly Natives Give an Ovation—A Popular Wealthy Land—The Natives know Who their Best Friend Is.

Extracts of a letter from Stanley African explorer, to a friend in London, been published. The following is in full. It is dated Stanley river, July 14.

You must have read the telegram that appeared in the English stating that one of our stations was attacked, and the chief of the station was gravely wounded. It was sent by a house which, strange to say, had numerous antagonists, and as the station was located at the mouth of the river, the slightest rumor of trouble is exaggerated. It was to this silly telegram that I was for being despatched so suddenly again, when I was very unfit for the journey. The news was grave, it is true, but the character we were told. I had been shot in the arm, but not seriously. I had been attacked. Our chief was heartily disliked, and it seems to me that he combined to discourage him. I was successful, and he left the expedition without a responsible head, and for the next half a dozen clamorous complaints even became disorganized, for the orders were respected by the chiefs of stations also getting from such a state of affairs, many had gone home. This was a serious affair, but no station was in attack.

Six months have brought two natives, after comparison, have learned who their best friend is, and in my absence from the Congo did more for them favorably toward me than years' work of patient and just dealing. All along the line I received a cordial reception. Each district testified its joy quite distinctly. It would be unbecomingly to dilate on this. Since I have been here, carriers have appeared by hundreds. The question of transportation has become of great importance; that is, I am no longer about the future. Our stations have been supplied easily with native help, though I doubted that natives here would be in force enough to do reliable service. Now I am hopeful.

Since I arrived on the Congo river I have been up as far as the station where I have established two more stations. I am discovering another lake, Marou, exploring for one hundred miles about, the river known on my map as Ikkelambu, but which is really the Itis. It is not as large as I stated in my letter, but a stream the size of the Arkansas broad and very navigable. The river which I expect must drain the lower part of the south Congo basin must be higher up. Having become better acquainted with the country I am really struck by the dense population of the equatorial part of the basin, which, if it were throughout, would give 49,000,000. The number of products and the number of the people are likewise remarkable.

NAPANEE EXPRESS

NAPANEE, ONT., FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1883.

REMOVAL.

THE EXPRESS is now settled in its new quarters, Symington block, two doors west of P. Slaven & Co.'s. The premises are larger, more convenient and more centrally located than the old. The equipment of THE EXPRESS establishment is now second to none of the town printing offices in the province.

A large quantity of new material has been added to the job department, making it one of the best in the district. We have now facilities for doing all classes of work, from the largest colored poster to the smallest card, in the best possible manner, and at prices as low as the lowest. We respectfully solicit your patronage.

The newspaper department has also received attention. We hope in a few weeks to introduce in THE EXPRESS new features which will tend to increase its interest and make it still more worthy of the support of the public. We ask our friends to continue their kind efforts in extending the circulation of the paper. We want an additional four hundred subscribers by 1st January next, and if those who have taken so active an interest in getting new subscribers in the past will only exert themselves now for a few weeks this number can easily be obtained.

TERRIBLE OUTRAGE.—A despatch to the Belleville Ontario on Wednesday states that a brutal outrage has just been perpetrated here. One of our citizen, a married man and a father of a large family, a few nights since, forcibly entered the house of an unoffending woman, who lived alone, and of the age of at least sixty years. When resistance was offered to his brutal intentions the scoundrel forcibly dragged her from the house in her night clothes, and in a state of unconsciousness. Here she was found by the neighbors and taken care of. Before measures were taken for his arrest he cleared for parts unknown, and will possibly go unwhipt of justice. This is to be deplored, as the man is an old offender and certainly unfit to be at large. Every man who has a mother or a wife should be interested in bringing such offenders against social order to prompt punishment.

—Rev. Mr. Phillips, of Morven, preached a fine sermon in the C. M. Church, Wilton, on Sunday last. Morven circuit is fortunate in having as minister a man possessed of so much ability. I was pleased to see Mr. Jenkins, of Centreville, occupying his old position in the choir. His full, rich bass attracted considerable attention.

—There's a hay pressing machine in this place actively engaged. Mr. John Stuart, of Wilton, formerly of Brandon, has charge of the machinery.

—Mr. Jackson, sexton of the C. M. Church in this town, has opened a butcher shop and doing a rattling trade.

—The material for the manufacture of first-class pie is decidedly scarce. Apples are among the things that were, and Mr. Smith, the great dealer in pumpkins, reports great scarcity in that very useful article of food.

—The little unpleasantness between Captain Abbie and some of the Salvation Army officers has had a tendency to cool the ardor some of their adherents, and as a natural consequence stock in the Saved Army has advanced. Both organizations have, no doubt, accomplished much good, not only in the salvation of sinners, but as being the means of causing all classes to exercise their vocal organs to their fullest extent. Everybody sings—even the street Arabs—with more energy than ability, salvation songs. I am pleased to hear of their success in Bath, and the bright prospects there are for Romeo's conversion.

CHURCH NOTES.—Last Sabbath being the day appointed for holding missionary services in the C. M. Church, we wended our way thither with the multitude. The congregation was at first somewhat disappointed in not seeing Rev. Mr. Leach, of Odessa (who is sick) in the pulpit, but we are certain that those who heard Rev. Wm. Briden, the pastor in charge, were amply repaid for any temporary disappointment. His sermon was logical, forcible, and delivered with great earnestness. The point which he sought to impress was that no nation without revelation has found out that there is forgiveness of sin. The choir rendered music in their accustomed skilful manner, and everything of an intellectual character was done to render the meeting a success. . . . On Monday evening the missionary speech was delivered by Rev. J. N. Beaudry. Mr. Beaudry is —A few of our young folks paid an esteemed friend of theirs, near Enterprise, a visit last Saturday evening, and had an immense time.

—From all appearances some of our young men are contemplating matrimony, especially those who drive the sorrel and gray. We presume they will not carry such a smiling countenance when their fair damsels take their departure from this vicinity. We cannot see why those young men are so partial towards their girls, unless they intend to hitch and travel in double harness soon.

—Indeed, our old bachelors have revived again. They make their appearance up street nearly every two weeks. I think they are afraid John A. will be for enforcing the law that they are to be taxed twenty-five dollars apiece to keep up old maids. Old bachelors better hustle.

—The young man who, while enjoying a drive last week, carelessly allowed his horse to walk into a ditch, thereby upsetting and almost demolishing his buggy, thinks he will in future keep his hands on the reins. Good resolve, but not taken soon enough. P. S.—Both parties escaped without serious injury.

—C. Baker, merchant tailor, has taken possession of McCreary's new house, where he will be found in future even better prepared than formerly to give first-class fits to his patrons. If you don't believe me, try him.

—The revival services here formally closed on Thursday of last week, when over thirty members were added to the church. The services have been very impressive throughout, and cannot have failed in doing good.

—There were forty-one ladies and gentlemen confirmed by Bishop Lewis at Newburgh on Monday last, of which number fourteen were from this village. Rev. Mr. Elliott was deservedly complimented on his large and very interesting class.

—What at first appeared to me the nasal music of my next door neighbour fell upon my ear on Monday night last I was soon led to doubt my first impression when I noticed the music only encompassed an octave, and on instituting a search found a mosquito, the last of the season, searching for some place to hibernate, but being proficient in the science of taxidermy I enclose the body to you. It will be a fine addition to the usual county fair displays.

—Our cheese factory closed for the season on Wednesday last. We are informed that the season has been exceptionally profitable. Mr. Powers has certainly given good satisfaction this year.

—Miss Baxter, of Kingston, is organizing a class in music here this week. Should she meet with sufficient encouragement she will spend the winter here.

—Misses Bella and Nellie Fee are visiting friends in Toronto.

—We are sorry indeed to have to say that our esteemed townsman, Alex. Dickens, Esq., purposes leaving us soon. We can assure Mr. and Mrs. Dickens that they will carry to their new home in Quebec the best wishes of their many friends here for their future success.

HUNTING NOTES.—Messrs. Peter Am—Priest, of Bath, and Scott Bros. and Johnston, of Napanee, passed through on the 16th, en route for the hunting grounds. The former party passed a latter domiciled at Mr. F. Beausoilliel. The Napanee party, Messrs. Miller, and Moore, who were accompanied by Messrs. A. P. Wickware and J. T. Stine, champion dog "setter," were exceedingly fortunate, making no less than deer "bite the dust," in about ten days. By experienced hunters this is considered a great success, deer being more numerous than formerly. Joyful over their luck Napaneeans wended their way per street the front, followed by a fair waggon load of fine trophies. Many were the expressions of thanks given Mr. A. P. Wickware, master of Cloyne, for his kind hospitality and assistance.

—Judging from the crowd at D. A. Cicer's hotel he must be doing an excellent trade. Room can scarcely be found for a large number of guests, and although the house is large it is found quite inadequate on many occasions.

—Barrie township collector, Mr. Benney, reports taxes coming in to about $750 at the first call.

—The Inspector of Public Schools, Agnew, M. A., M. D., performed his official school visits a short time since. He reports on the condition of the schools very favorable.

—Since Gilmore's employees finished logging at the tramway on the 19th ult. J. S. Sutherland, of Belleville, has a gang of men engaged running some thirty-five sand which the foreman, John Wint Gilmore & Co.'s firm, says can be done in seven or eight weeks from the time of logging.

—Another grand hunting expedition has been arranged by and made under the auspices of Mr. A. P. Wickware which eclipse all previous ones for a long time. It is more elite and more elaborately equipped with luxuries. Discrimination is nice that even "Jim's" services are dispensed, though prepared to do the "set." All necessities were sent up on the 27th to Wolf Lake, the hunting grounds. Among the privileged number are Messrs. A. Madge and G. Corby, of Belleville.

—On account of some arrangements for the last of the Gilmore lumber (J. McCaw's) got notice to quit, on Monday the men were paid off, discharged and started for Madoc, leaving in a hasty manner. It is rumored quite a few will shortly be established and the lumber business carried on quite extensively.

—Mrs. F. Beausoilliel and son returned on the 16th from Prince Edward County, they have been visiting friends for several days. . . . Mrs. Beausoilliel's mother, Annie Clark, who resides with her son Geo. Clark, is very feeble, being now declining years. The aged lady being one of the descendants of the brave U. E. Militia, had much experience in the trials and difficulties in the development of the good old county of Prince Edward. The family have many relatives who are connected with a great number of the families in that section. . . . Mr. Jno. W. wife and sister-in-law, the latter a resident of the Township of Brock, the former of Prince Edward County, were visiting relatives in this section. The two ladies

—The little unpleasantness between Captain Abbie and some of the Salvation Army men has had a tendency to cool the ardor some of their adherents, and as a natural consequence stock in the Saved Army has advanced. Both organizations have, no doubt, accomplished much good, not only in the salvation of sinners, but as being the means of causing all classes to exercise their moral organs to their fullest extent. Every body sings—even the street Arabs—with more energy than ability, salvation songs. I am pleased to hear of their success in Bath, and the bright prospects there are for Rev. R. O.'s conversion.

—A concert and fruit festival will be held in Florida (near Wilton) on Tuesday evening, Nov. 6th. K. WILSON.

CHURCH NOTES.—Last Sabbath being the 7th appointed for holding missionary services in the C. M. Church, we wended our way thither with the multitude. The choir rendered music in their accustomed skilful manner, and everything an intellectual character was done to render the meeting a success. . . . On Monday morning the missionary speech was delivered by Rev. I. N. Beaudry. Mr. Beaudry is one of the ablest speakers we have heard for some time. His sermon on Sunday evening was listened to with the deepest attention for one hour and a quarter by the largest audience that we have seen in the church some time. The collections and subscriptions amounted to $132, with several of the young men of the community to be heard from. . . . The Methodists have purchased a new lot for their church at a cost of $122. The temple is nearly completed—in fact, they are the “go ahead” people of the town.

BIBLE SOCIETY.—Rev. Dr. Hodgson, who is to have delivered the annual Bible Society lecture did not put in an appearance—no doubt on account of the poor success he met with last year.

SAVED ARMY.—The Saved Army began their operations last Wednesday. They are making fair progress, but they will need to put forth all their energy, for there are some old sinners in the 'Burgh that don't come out without prayer and fasting.

TEMPERANCE.—Mr. Flynn, an able temperance orator, delivered his celebrated address, “War vs. Whiskey,” in Burdett's hall. The audience was very attentive as unfolded the expenses of war and of the Sultan's harem. We also had music from the celebrated choir of the 'Burgh, and spent very enjoyable time. Mr. Farley occupied the chair, and at the close of the address he presented the compliments of the audience to the speaker.

—It would be difficult to find a place in the Dominion of its size that is better blessed than the 'Burgh with every kind of entertainment calculated to promote the welfare him.

—The revival services here formally closed on Thursday of last week, when over thirty members were added to the church. The services have been very impressive throughout, and cannot have failed in doing good.

—Mr. Howatt of the Bay View farm, last week sold two Jersey cows and a calf at fancy prices.

—The new Roman Catholic church will be opened on Nov. 11. High Mass will be celebrated at 10 o'clock a. m., and Rev. Father Gauthier, of Montreal, will preach in English and French.

—The sale of a portion of the Indian Reserve, immediately west of the village, took place on Wednesday, 24th ult. It brought together a large number of intending purchasers, all anxious to avail themselves of such an opportunity to get a desirable building lot. Mr. Wilkins was auctioneer, and the bidding was brisk, 58 lots out of 73 being disposed of at prices ranging from $250 to $1,100, the average being about $370. The total value of lots sold was over $20,000.

—The officers of the Grand Council of Indians of the Province of Ontario will present an address of welcome to the Marquis of Lansdowne on the 7th inst. at Rideau Hall, Ottawa. Chief Annosoktha, President; Chief James Styers, 1st Vice-President; Chief Solomon James, 2nd Vice-President; Chief P. E. Jones, M. D., Secretary.

—The Rathbun Co. have secured a contract for furnishing about ten cars of manufactured wood material required in the construction of a large hotel at Algoma Mills, on the Canada Pacific Railway. They have also in addition made a contract for furnishing the material and erection of seven passenger stations, with freight houses and platforms, along the line of the Ontario & Quebec and which the foreman, John Wintre Gilmore & Co.'s firm says can be done in seven or eight weeks from the time of ing.

Her family have many relatives who are connected with a great number of the families in that section. . . . Mr. Jno. W. wife and sister-in-law, the latter a resident of the Township of Brock, the former of Prince Edward County, were visiting relatives in this section, the two ladies sisters of Mrs. F. Beausoiliel. The latter turned home on the 26th inst., pleased with the visit, especially the good hearted hospitality of the host, W. F. Beausoiliel, not discouraged by the appearance of the country, though it is now in “the sea of yellow leaf.” . . . Mr. Wright, teacher, formerly of Bath, has an attraction here which draws him north. . . . Mrs. E. Jones of Flinton, was visiting here on Sunday last. Clovne, Oct. 19, 1883.

Presentation at Tamworth.

The Kirk session of Camden and Tamworth with their wives met in the market square on the evening of Wednesday last and presented the Rev. Jno. I. man, of Newburgh, with a handsome silver pitcher as a mark of esteem and respect to him, and at the same time as a slight token of knowledge for the valuable services rendered by him to the congregation during his office as Moderator. Mr. Daniel more, elder, made the presentation in happy words, and Mr. Leishman briefly replied in accepting the gift. The congregation afterwards sat down to an excellent dinner provided by the ladies. Mrs. Smith, wife of the respected pastor, was also recipient of an elegant set of China. The congregation is now in a flourishing state.

SIX MONTHS ON THE CONGO.

Full Text of the Great African Explorer's Letter-Friendly Natives Give Stanley
an Ovation-A Populous and Wealthy Land-The Natives know Who their Best Friend Is.

Extracts of a letter from Stanley, the great African explorer, to a friend in Boston, have been published. The following is the letter in full. It is dated Stanley Pool, Congo river, July 14.

You must have read the sensational telegram that appeared in the English papers, stating that one of our stations had been attacked, and the chief of the expedition gravely wounded. It was sent by the Dutch house which, strange to say, has joined our numerous antagonists, and as the Dutch are located at the mouth of the Congo, the slightest rumor of trouble is exaggerated. It was to this silly telegram that I am indebted for being despatched so suddenly to Congo again, when I was very unfit as you know. The news was grave, it is true, but not of the character we were told. The chief had been shot in the arm, but no station had been attacked. Our chief was, however, heartily disliked, and it seems that the subs combined to discourage him. This proved successful, and he left the expedition without a responsible head, and for the post there were half a dozen clamorous claimants. It even became disorganized, for no one's orders were respected by the mass, and the chiefs of stations also getting discouraged from such a state of affairs, many of them had gone home. This was a sad state of affairs, but no station was in danger of attack.

Six months have brought wonders. The natives, after comparison, have begun to learn who their best friend is, and my short absence from the Congo did more to impress them favorably toward me than my three years' work of patient and just dealing. All along the line I received an ovation, and each district testified its joy quite characteristically. It would be unbecoming in me to dilate on this. Since I have arrived carriers have appeared by hundreds, and the question of transportation has lost its importance; that is, I am no longer anxious about the future. Our stations can be supplied easily with native help, though I once doubted that natives here would ever appear in force enough to do reliable and efficient service. Now I am hopeful.

Since I arrived on the Congo last December I have been up as far as the equator, and have established two more stations, besides discovering another lake, Mar tumba, and exploring for one hundred miles or thereabouts, the river known on my map as the Ikelambu, but which is really the Malundu. It is not as large as I stated in my book, but a stream the size of the Arkansas, deep, broad and very navigable. The big stream which I expect must drain the largest part of the south Congo basin must be somewhere higher up. Having become better acquainted with the country I am really struck with the dense population of the equatorial part of the basin, which, if it were uniform throughout, would give 49,000,000 souls.

Dyeing the Hair.

Dyeing the hair is a nasty habit, and as vulgar as it is nasty. Yet a great many people from whom better things might be expected, persist in doing this. Why will they? It deceives none. There is an artificiality about the appearance of dyed hair that is as evident as a second-class politician's faith in the virtues of lying. If it improved the appearance there might be some excuse for it. But it doesn't. On the contrary, it more frequently coarsens and vulgarizes the face, and gives a cheap made-up look to the whole person of the man or woman who is foolish enough to try it. There is nothing to be ashamed of in gray hairs as so many seem to think, but the very opposite. Good friends, please don't dye.

A story is going the rounds just now that a certain well-known and deservedly popular clergyman in Toronto is guilty of this dyeing practise. If true it argues very poor taste on his part. A gray-haired minister may be an object of reverent regard, and a very efficient aid to devotional feeling, but one who has the artificiality and made-upness of dyed hair about him never can.

We have already said that hair-dyeing is ridiculous. It is more than that. It is highly injurious and for health reasons ought not to be done. It is besides quite incompatible with perfect cleanliness and is essentially vulgar and low bred.

Smoke from the swamp fires near West-boro, Mass., has been so dense for some days that teams entering the town have lost their reckoning, and millmen have had to use a fog horn. A farmer got off his course and had to be piloted back to his starting place.

Preparations are being made in Montreal for the holding of a winter carnival similar to that of last year.

in force enough to do reliable and efficient service. Now I am hopeful.

Since I arrived on the Congo last December I have been up as far as the equator, and have established two more stations, besides discovering another lake, Mar tumba, and exploring for one hundred miles or thereabouts, the river known on my map as the Ikkelambu, but which is really the Malundu.
It is not as large as I stated in my book, but a stream the size of the Arkansas, deep, broad and very navigable. The big stream which I expect must drain the largest part of the south Congo basin must be somewhere higher up. Having become better acquainted with the country I am really struck with the dense population of the equatorial part of the basin, which, if it were uniform
throughout, would give 49,000,000 souls.
The number of products and the character of the people are likewise remarkable. The gums, rubber, ivory, camphor, wood and a host of other things would repay transportation, even by the very expensive mode at present in use. The people are born traders, and are, for Africans, very enterprising and industrious. They are bold in their expeditions, and risk everything to turn an honest penny.

My reception by this people was very flattering. Two incidents which occurred will keep my memory green for some time.
A populous district was divided against itself, and there was nothing but war, throat cutting, carrying off of women, and much other atrocious evil. One of the chiefs in more prosperous times had visited one of my stations below, and we had purchased a fine, large canoe from him, which we had with us. He recognized it as we were sailing past, and called out. We went ashore and made up our minds to halt and buy provisions. It was then I learned that the chief was at war with his former friends, and among the names of the chiefs that he mentioned was one who had pledged brotherhood with one of my subordinates. The causes of the war and all else I soon learned, and I then asked:

"How long have you been fighting?"
"Two months."
"Can I not do something to stop it?"
"Oh, yes, if you will. They will all listen to you. We are well tired of it, because we lose money and life, but we dare not ask for peace first."

I sent two of my boats to the rival chiefs and told them if they wished to see me and to make brotherhood with me to stop the war. "We leave it to you," they said.
"You decide as to who is wrong, and let the guilty party pay a fine." Three days' talk settled the matter, peace was declared, and I was elected father and mother of the country. A little below there was another populous district called Hoindi. They heard of what I had done and sent me a very hearty welcome. Here also I was elected father and mother.

I have been delighted with my trip and enjoyed robust health. Indeed I feel at this moment as strong and as active as ever. The only anxiety I have is for the new Europeans, who, before they are acclimated or before they have learned the simple art of doctor-

 "Can I not do something to stop it?"
 "Oh, yes, if you will. They will all listen to you. We are well tired of it, because we lose money and life, but we dare not ask for peace first."
 I sent two of my boats to the rival chiefs and told them if they wished to see me and to make brotherhood with me to stop the war. "We leave it to you," they said. "You decide as to who is wrong, and let the guilty party pay a fine." Three days' talk settled the matter, peace was declared, and I was elected father and mother of the country. A little below there was another populous district called Hoindi. They heard of what I had done and sent me a very hearty welcome. Here also I was elected father and mother.
 I have been delighted with my trip and enjoyed robust health. Indeed I feel at this moment as strong and as active as ever. The only anxiety I have is for the new Europeans, who, before they are acclimated or before they have learned the simple art of doctoring themselves, are a great trouble, though I have two doctors to attend the sick.

The Interior of the Earth.
 That the interior of the earth is the seat of intense heat is a familiar truth. Volcanic phenomena give us ocular demonstration of it. Mining experiences, moreover, have furnished us with an almost uniform rate at which the heat increases, and is generally computed to be about 1 degree Fahrenheit for every 55 feet of descent. But mining experiences are necessarily very limited. The deepest mine in England, that of the Rose-bridge Colliery near Wigan, takes us down only 2442 feet and to a temperature not much exceeding 90 degrees Fahrenheit. It is hot enough to make the work exceedingly trying to the miners but that is all. This, however, is (so to speak) scarcely traversing the earth's epidermis. But if we assume a uniform heat in descending, the temperature at a depth of fifty miles may be expressed in figures at 4,800 degrees Fahrenheit. In other words, at less than an eighth of the distance which lies between the circumference of the earth and its centre, the heat would be about 22 times the heat of boiling water at the sea level. Proportionate figures might, of course, express the heat at greater depths still, but figures fail to convey any idea to the mind of that which must necessarily transcend all imaginations. Suffice it to say, that in a descending series we must eventually come to a heat so great that no substance with which we are acquainted could, under any conditions which we can imagine, exist in it in either solid or fluid form. And we conclude, therefore, that if the earth's centre be itself in a gaseous condition (and there is reason to think that it may not be so) there must be a gaseous zone somewhat between a solid centre and a solid circumference.

Catarrh Cured.
*Gentlemen,—*I am forty years of age, and have been afflicted for the past ten years with Catarrh. I was recommended to try your Fountain of Health, which I am still using, and, although not perfectly cured, I am so much improved that I heartily recommend it any one suffering from the same disease. While taking it for the above disease, a severe pain, which I had in my side, has entirely left me.

Kidney Disease.
*Dear Sirs,—*I take pleasure in testifying to the benefits I have received from the use of your Fountain of Health. For over nine years I have suffered from disease of the Kidneys, having a severe pain in the back a great deal of the time and a tenderness of the eye balls. No remedies that I have ever tried, and I have used no end of them, gave me relief, except your Fountain of Health, which has made me feel good. I have used two of your dollar bottles.
 Yours sincerely,

Dyeing the Hair.

The hair is a nasty habit, and as is nasty. Yet a great many whom better things might be expected to do this. Why will they persist in doing this? There is an artificial appearance of dyed hair evident as a second-class politician in the virtues of lying. If it is the appearance there might be something for it. But it doesn't. On the more frequently coarsens and the face, and gives a cheap made-whole person of the man or woman is foolish enough to try it. Nothing to be ashamed of in gray many seem to think, but the ite. Good friends, please don't going the rounds just now that all-known and deservedly popular in Toronto is guilty of this dyeing if true it argues very poor taste.

A gray-haired minister may be reverent regard, and a very to devotional feeling, but one artificiality and made-upness of about him never can. I already said that hair-dyeing is. It is more than that. It is rious and for health reasons ought one. It is besides quite incommuth perfect cleanliness and is vulgar and low bred.

Oh, my Back!

Is there a miserable, weakening pain in the small of the back? Is urination painful? Do you have palpitation of the heart? Do strange, indescribable feelings creep up your back and sides? Does the least exertion weary you? Does your urine show brickdust or albuminous deposit? Does any sudden fright cause an intense, sharp pain in the small of your back? Do you have an aching in the groin? Is your memory impaired? Is your breath short? Are there shooting pains about your vitals? Are you becoming dropsical?

These are all symptoms of kidney diseases. Be on your guard against them. If let run it may end in Bright's Disease, which is sure death.

Your best course is to procure at once a bottle of SULPHUR AND IRON BITTERS costing only 50c. It will cure any form of Kidney Complaint, except Bright's Disease, it will relieve the symptoms and defer the evil day sometimes indefinitely.

SULPHUR AND IRON BITTERS is a medicine as harmless as water. The world has not seen its equal as a cure for diseases which attack the Kidneys and for the complaints to which females are alone liable. It is of more value than any medical compound known to the medical faculty.

The Excelsior Rapture treatment was introduced to the American people several years ago in such a manner as to completely secure the confidence of the whole nation.
 The mode of introduction was by furnishing the remedy to those afflicted with Hernia in any of its various forms and collecting no pay until a permanent cure was effected. In this way the treatment gained a world-wide reputation on its own merits, never failing to cure any reducible Hernia. The Company has at the solicitation of thousands placed the remedy on sale by all druggists, both wholesale and retail, in the United States, Canada and England. In this way

POPE LEO AT HOME.

Everyday Life of the Holy Father.—A Reception to Irish Pilgrims.

The Capitan Fracassa, of Rome, publishes a conversation which one of its correspondents had with the Rev. Philip Barry, canon of the Cashel cathedral. The canon is said to have spoken as follows:—"Leo XIII. is now seventy-four years of age. He is tall, thin, and bony. His face is of an ivory tint, and his eyes and lips are very expressive and smiling. He looks very firm. Simeoni says he resembles Voltaire, but Leo XII.'s smile is totally different to Voltaire's smile. The Pope wears his age well, and walks remarkably straight. He has snow white hair and very finely marked eyebrows. His eyes are wonderfully intelligent looking and his voice is extremely harmonious. He speaks several languages as well as any professor of languages. He never says a foolish thing nor does a foolish thing, like poor Pius IX., whose policy was fatal to the Pope's temporal power. He rises very early and spends the first hours of the day in prayer, and generally in his bedroom. At six o'clock he says mass. At eight o'clock he breaks his fast with a cup of chocolate, reading his correspondence all the time. At nine o'clock he receives Jacobini and those chiefs of religious societies who may demand audience. At noon he receives those Roman patriarchs who have remained true to him and the Ambassadors. At one o'clock he dines, his dinner rarely costing more than two francs, or half a dollar."—"And he keeps so many cooks!" said the correspondent. "He is obliged to keep up appearances," answered the canon. "Once upon a time Popes were great eaters and drinkers, and were given to every kind of extravagance, but Leo XIII. is nothing of all this.

IN THE GARDEN.

"After dinner he takes a little walk in the Vatican grounds, or he visits the museums and galleries. Sometimes he is carried in a chair quilted with white satin. He is very fond of the garden. He frequently receives visitors in the garden and talks of flowers to them to avoid other subjects. The first and second time I saw him was in the garden. When I went with the pilgrims he was preceded by three noble guards, and at his side was Mgr. Macchi, his secret chamberlain. He wore a wide-brimmed hat and a large red cloak. We were presented to him one by one. He looked at us and scrutinized us well. I saw he recognized me, but he treated me like the others—as if he saw me also for the first time. 'Are you all Irish?' he said; 'I am happy to receive the faithful of that nation!' He then looked again at us as if he would have read into our souls. 'Your bishop,' he continued, 'brought me offerings from a people pressed with poverty.' Then, seeing me still on my knees, he offered me his hand to raise me. 'I had thought,' he continued, 'that the offering would have decreased, but it was not so. We live on charity' (and here he smiled sadly), 'for all we had has been taken from us. Oh, these persecutions!' he cried with a loud voice. 'They purify us, even when the heaven is pure and immaculate.'

AT AN AUDIENCE.

"I seem to see him now" said the canon.

House Drainage.

Col. Waring of Newport, in his paper on "Plumbing and House-Drainage," read before the Social Science Association at Saratoga said: It is not possible in the present state of the art of house drainage, to have a stationery wash-stand in every bed-room of the house, a bath, sitz-bath, water-closet, urinal and wash-stand in each of several bath-rooms on every floor, to have a slop-hopper in every dark closet, with sinks and laundry trays and servants' closets scattered here and there at whim, and at the same time protect the household against all the possibilities of "bad drainage." A most important step in sanitary reform is to be sought in the subjection of house-building fancies to sanitary security. In this case, "security" is very largely a synonym of "simplicity." It is convenient of course, to have a water supply and waste-pipes at every turn; but here an excess of convenience is to be purchased only with an increase of risk. In this case especially, the judicious builder will hold a firm rein on the desire for a luxurious diffusion of conveniences.

The production of waste is an inevitable incident of human life. The excretions of the person, the discarded portions of food, the water of ablutions and of the laundry and the various organic dust and offal of the household, are all then liable to become a nuisance dangerous to life unless properly removed. They are rarely dangerous when first produced, but they become dangerous as they enter into the decomposition which is the fate of all discarded organic matter. This refuse must, in one way or another, be removed before decomposition develops its power for mischief. Regarding the waste-pipe through which the refuse must be removed, it should be of such material and construction that it will permanently carry away all water that may reach it. The joints of this conduit must be secured against leakage. Col. Waring tells us that he has tested very few soil-pipes under a head of water in which leaks through imperfect joints had not been developed.

The interior of the conduit should be as nearly as possible in the same atmospheric condition as the air outside of the house. That is to say, there should be a circulation to facilitate the rapid decomposition of the inevitable sliming of the walls, and the immediate dilution and removal of the gaseous products of such decomposition. In working towards this condition, we first carried up small vent-pipes from the tops of our soil pipes; later we continued the pipe, full bore, to the top of the house; later still, we introduced a supply of fresh air at the foot to maintain a complete circulation; and last of all, we enlarged the soil pipe at its top to increase the draft.

As with the conduit itself, so with the receptacles and connecting pipes leading to it. These should be sufficiently ventilated in every part, and all closets and sinks of every sort should be so freely exposed to the open air that no suspicion of "closeness" can ever attach to them.

At every point, the water used for the transportation of the wastes that are to pass through our pipes, should be used in the most effective way. A thread of water run-that the more we concentrate of wastes through single chamber. One water-closet is better; it will afford reasonable comfort; bath waste is kept in better more frequently the contents tube are discharged through the fewer bath tubs the be throughout the whole range appliances. Many "sanitary and more plumbers, will tell that is pure theory, and will assent to, a wealth of convenience the house. Plumbers are proved to learn; but they learn, never they will in due time accept this as the wisest practice. Their duty well to anticipate them. — Monthly.

Out of Doors.

There is great variety as well the cloaks and mantles of the present—"Carriage" cloaks—that is, vi—take the pelisse form, and adorned or broche velvet, or bro with sash, and high, open slee dolman sleeves. Oh, these persecutions!' he cried with a loud voice. 'They purify us, even when the heaven is pure and immaculate.'

AT AN AUDIENCE.

"I seem to see him now," said the canon. "His head looked like a relief on the blue sky. The sun was setting, and he looked up to the sky, as if seeking an inspiration there. 'I have heard,' he then said, 'that, notwithstanding the general state of anguish in Ireland the churches are full of people. May the Lord be praised and blessed, and may my prayers bring peace on the people! Lord hear our prayers and judge us!' He then blessed us, and the audience was finished. I have never seen so much power united to so much sympathy. At four o'clock the Pope resumes his official audiences in the Vatican. At seven o'clock only he takes a little rest, but at eight o'clock he returns to work in his private room, where he remains until ten o'clock, when he retires for the night, not always to sleep, though, for it is during the night that he reads and writes for his own pleasure, his favorite subject being the 'Science of St. Thomas' and essays on the work of that saint, which he receives from every part of the world, whenever and wherever published."

Velvet in Demand.

Velvet is in extraordinary demand this season, and to supply the wants of those who cannot afford to purchase silk velvet the greatest efforts have been made to produce a velveteen that shall give the effect of a pure velvet and possess wearing qualities. More or less success has attended several of these undertakings, the production of the broche Nonpareil velveteen last year being attended with signal and deserved success, for it is a woven fabric; and therefore superior to stamped velvets of a more costly kind, for they will not stand exposure. This year the same company have brought out a new make of solid velveteen as a fine substitute for the famous Genoa velvet, which it resembles in appearance—thickness of surface, closeness, and depth of pile, and purity of color. The new make of velveteen is called the "Baveno," and we advise ladies who intend to purchase velveteen suits—jackets or dresses for children—to order the "Baveno," which a really handsome fabric, and particularly good in the new "Mascot" (copper color), plum, ruby, mouse, blue-gray and brown shades.

The broche Nonpareil velveteen appears in distinguished patterns, and will be in high vogue for winter cloaks and combination costumes. It is particularly effective for theatre cloaks and wraps, and being cut in the long, close patterns which are now so fashionable, with high shoulder and short dolman sleeves, the single width, which is that of ordinary silk velvet, is no objection, as it cuts to equal advantage with the pipes; later we continued the pipe, full bore, to the top of the house; later still, we introduced a supply of fresh air at the foot to maintain a complete circulation; and last of all, we enlarged the soil pipe at its top to increase the draft.

As with the conduit itself, so with the receptacles and connecting pipes leading to it. These should be sufficiently ventilated in every part, and all closets and sinks of every sort should be so freely exposed to the open air that no suspicion of "closeness" can ever attach to them.

At every point, the water used for the transportation of the wastes that are to pass through our pipes, should be used in the most effective way. A thread of water running from an imperfect faucet is practically of no value whatever. It follows a narrow and uncertain course along the side of the soil-pipe or drain, with no power to wash its general surface, and with no power to remove accumulations. It is pure and unadulterated waste. Incidentally, it may be said that in very many houses its total volume is far greater than that of all the water used, and that in many towns, including New York City, the aggregation of these ineffective dribblings is almost the sole source of insufficient water supply. It is hardly practicable, under any ordinary head, especially on the upper floors of houses, to deliver into a water closet or into a slop-hopper or sink, a sufficient stream of water to secure the efficient cleansing of its waste-pipe. It is in this direction that one of the most important of modern reforms is being exerted, working rapidly towards a most effective improvement in the whole practice of house drainage. The watchword of our best present movement is the word "Flush!" It will not be long, we may be sure, before it will be universally understood that, after pipe ventilation the great secret of good drainage lies in the use of abundant volumes of water delivered in a mass along with each contribution of filth. A perfect system of drainage and water supply would be one where, at all ordinary times, not a drop of water flowed through the outlet channels, only occasional dashes of several gallons, lubricating the walls of the pipes, and carrying along completely and with velocity substances which, under the old system, smeared their sluggish road along the pipe, and left material for infectious decomposition at every step.

In the discharge pipes, of house building, great simplicity should be borne in mind.

Drainage works may be introduced into a house in such a manner as to be, to all intents and purposes, absolutely safe. The shade of apprehension which they may justly cause, is, in the case of simple and well arranged work, practically not to be considered. It is, however, a case suggesting something like the mathematical expression, "inversely as the square of the distance." If a certain amount of piping is in the least degree dangerous, twice that amount is four times as dangerous, and four times that amount sixteen times as dangerous, and so on—not absolutely, of course, but relatively.

In other words, while we make our drainage works as perfect as possible, let us limit ourselves in all cases to the very smallest amount of piping, the least amount of ramification, and the smallest number of water-closets and other vessels consistent with reasonable convenience. A stationery wash-stand in a bath-room, having a short and

Velvet in Demand.

Velvet is in extraordinary demand this season, and to supply the wants of those who cannot afford to purchase silk velvet the greatest efforts have been made to produce a velveteen that shall give the effect of a pure velvet and possess wearing qualities. More or less success has attended several of these undertakings, the production of the broche Nonpareil velveteen last year being attended with signal and deserved success, for it is a woven fabric; and therefore superior to stamped velvets of a more costly kind, for they will not stand exposure. This year the same company have brought out a new make of solid velveteen as a fine substitute for the famous Genoa velvet, which it resembles in appearance—thickness of surface, closeness, and depth of pile, and purity of color. The new make of velveteen is called the "Baveno," and we advise ladies who intend to purchase velveteen suits—jackets or dresses for children—to order the "Baveno," which a really handsome fabric, and particularly good in the new "Mascot" (copper color), plum, ruby, mouse, blue-gray and brown shades.

The broche Nonpareil velveteen appears in distinguished patterns, and will be in high vogue for winter cloaks and combination costumes. It is particularly effective for theatre cloaks and wraps, and being cut in the long, close patterns which are now so fashionable, with high shoulder and short dolman sleeves, the single width, which is that of ordinary silk velvet, is no objection, as it cuts to equal advantage with the double, and may be lined with a quilted silk that is sold by the yard. The fact that the broche patterns are woven into the fabric is an advantage to be duly estimated, as patterns merely stamped in look common and "shiny" to begin with, and have a faculty for getting mixed up and leaving a ridge, which is a shabby and disagreeable substitute for a pattern.

Is there to be no end to those cases of suffocation by gas? The blowing out of the light by country bumpkins is bad enough and ought surely to be at an end by this time. Anybody who has either brains or business sufficient to bring him into the city or to lead him into an hotel, ought to know as much as not to blow out the gas. But there is another cause of the mischief. There are gas jets which have no stoppage to the little tap that shuts off the flow. Very easily and very innocently a man may turn this round too far and allow the gas to escape when he supposes that it was entirely shut off. Why should this be? Why not, if necessary, have a law against anything of the kind and make gas fitters, &c., punishable if they put up any of such a sort in either house or ware-room? If this were done there would be fewer accidents and deaths from the cause referred to.

In other words, while we make our drainage works as perfect as possible, let us limit ourselves in all cases to the very smallest amount of piping, the least amount of ramification, and the smallest number of water-closets and other vessels consistent with reasonable convenience. A stationery wash-stand in a bath-room, having a short and well flushed connection directly with the main-soil pipe, need never be objected to. A stationery basin ten or twenty or thirty feet distant, with a long connection pipe, should always be avoided. The luxury of an abundant flow of water in every bedroom seems, at first blush, to be worth all its cost. If we mean cost in money, this is true; if we mean cost in risk, it is by no means true. Practically, it is one of those luxuries in which no considerate person appreciating all the bearings of the case would think of indulging himself. One of the leading arguments of the trap-ventilation school is that such ventilation leads to the complete aeration of long lateral wastes. My remedy would be to abandon, as we always may, in new work, the use of long lateral wastes.

I should give an abundant supply of water at one convenient point on every floor. In larger houses, where bath-rooms and water-closets may be required at considerable distances from each other, I should give each its independent soil-pipe. Wherever a soil-pipe was constructed, I should permit a good deal of license as to the conveniences in its immediate vicinity. But the moment the question arose of giving a wash-stand, or a sitz-bath, or a urinal, to an apartment even ten feet away from the soil-pipe, I should exert all my influence in opposition to it. I should even oppose too generous a distribution of soil-pipes themselves, bearing always in mind the cardinal principle

A Foolish "Dare" that Ruined a Wedding.

Quite a party of girls were at Delaware Water Gap Railroad awaiting the arrival of the train when, in a spirit of mischief, dared the gayest of the party Pittsburgh, to rush up before arrival, seize him by the arm, "Oh, George! I'm so glad!" The lady "took the dare," as and, selecting a good-looking through the programme; but the words were uttered her own genuine that the gentleman she had mistaken him for so son. He accepted her stammering, watched her take the train and took the same route himself morning they met at breakfast matic meal; but Cupid had done and a mutual liking ensued, weeks of constant companionship ensued, and now they are discussing marriage bells.

that the more we concentrate our discharge of wastes through single channels the better. One water-closet is better than two, if it will afford reasonable convenience. A bath waste is kept in better condition the more frequently the contents of the bath tube are discharged through it; therefore the fewer bath tubs the better; and so throughout the whole range of plumbing appliances. Many "sanitary engineers," and more plumbers, will tell their clients that is pure theory, and will advise, or consent to, a wealth of conveniences all about the house. Plumbers are proverbially slow to learn; but they learn, nevertheless, and they will in due time accept the pure theory as the wisest practice. Their clients will do well to anticipate them. — Dio Lewis' Monthly.

Out of Doors.

There is great variety as well as luxury in the cloaks and mantles of the present season. "Carriage" cloaks—that is, visiting-cloaks—take the pelisse form, and are of embossed or broche velvet, or brocaded satin, with sash, and high, open sleeves, or short dolman sleeves. New cloak fabrics are of satin, or velvet with plush spots, flowers or large leaves, and these are lined with plush and trimmed with heavy chenille fringes and passementeries. A superb black velvet pelisse is showered about the throat and down the front, as well as upon the sleeves, with soft, "marabout" chenille fringe. The lining is quilted apricot satin. A cream cloth mantle, for theatre and opera wear, is richly trimmed with passementeries made in silk and gold; and a still more costly one, of white brocaded velvet, shows the design exquisitely outlined with gold embroidery against a lining of gold satin, and lovely fringes of gold and cream white chenille.

Braided cloth garments will doubtless be more popularly employed than for many years past, so many new effects having been produced by the intermixture of different kinds of braids, and the greater skill in the use of them. Narrow double-fold braids, combined with narrow Hercules braid—the latter set on end in what is known as the "nife-blade" pattern—are highly effective; and though these styles are yet confined to imported garments, and therefore expensive, because done by hand, yet there is a probability that the inventive genius of a woman has solved the problem of how to execute these difficult and artistic combinations by a simple machine attachment; and if this is the case, braiding as ornamentation, is yet in its infancy, and a new lease of life may be anticipated for it. Some beautiful effects have been produced upon the new light Vicugna cloths by embroidery braiding in ecru silk and gold. These are expensive, but the gold does not tarnish, and such styles never become common.

India Cashmere visites are in as high vogue as ever; they, also, are expensive and uncommon, and one is considered a necessary part of an outfit, much as a Cashmere shawl was formerly.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

A simple and suitable way to dress lettuce and tomato salad, is to beat up a fresh raw yolk of egg, add a teaspoonful of mixed mustard, three tablespoonsful of best oil, a pinch of salt, a soup-⁵on of red pepper, and vinegar to taste. These proportions are enough for four persons; increase according to number.

TO BROIL OYSTERS.—Procure large ones, wipe dry and broil over bright coals; do not bread them, and place them on a hot dish upon toast. Serve very hot.

Reception biscuits are made by mixing self-raising flour with cream, which roll into a thin, smooth paste; prick, cut and bake immediately. They should be kept dry in a close tin box. If the flour is not self-raising, salt it lightly and mix with it a dessert-spoonful of baking powder.

LUNCHEON DISH.—Trim the beards from as many oysters as may be required, wrap each in a very thin shaving of fat streaky bacon (cold boiled bacon is the best); run them one after the other on to a skewer, and hold them over a toast in front of a clear fire until the bacon is slightly crisp; serve on the toast immediately.

VEAL FRITTERS.—For these the remains of cold veal should be cut in small neat pieces; dip each in batter and fry a light brown; in serving pile them high on a dish, pouring over them a good brown sauce, well thickened with tomatoes when in season, or, if not, the gravy must itself be thick and strongly flavored with tomato sauce.

FRIENDLY LOAVES.—Beat half a dozen mealy potatoes with a quarter pound of grated ham, two eggs, a little butter, and a little cream, taking care not to make it too moist; form it into balls or small loaves, and fry them a nice light brown; they should be fried in butter. Pile them on a napkin, and serve with a garnish of fried parsley.

MINCIE MEAT.—One pound finely-chopped beef suet, two of rump steak (slightly broiled), three of apples, two of currants, two of raisins, one nutmeg, tablespoonful of cinnamon, rind of two lemons, quarter of a pound of mixed candied peel, one pound of sugar, two quarts of cider boiled down to one with a quart of maple syrup, a glass of raspberry jelly; a heaping teaspoonful of salt.

BAKED BEETS.—Wash them perfectly clean; put in a pan with a little water, and bake until they are tender; the time varies with the size of the beet, an hour being small enough allowance for a beet of medium size. When they are done remove the skin and serve in the same way that you do a boiled beet.

FARMER'S TEA-CAKE.—To two cups of sour milk allow one large teaspoonful of soda; dissolve this in a little hot water, then stir it in the milk; half a teaspoonful of salt is required, and enough buckwheat flour to make a stiff batter. Put this in a well-buttered tin and bake for half an hour in a hot oven.

TRAVELLER'S TOAST.—Mince any scraps of meat and season nicely; mix it with sufficient milk or cream to make it moist, and stir it over a gentle fire for five minutes. Draw it from the fire a moment, and mix

The new cloth redingotes are in different tones of color from those which prevailed last year—smoke-grays, fawn-brown, mouse-color, and snuff-brown are in high vogue. The newest style has a cape, and the recent addition of plaits or fullness in the back gives all the freedom required for the slight tournure or drapery.

The cape, is added to some cloaks with good effect, but it is, of course, for those that are most suitable for wraps, and that are made in checked cloths—mixed checks, such as bronze, brown, garnet, and black, with ecru lines. Epaulets for the shoulder are a feature of some of the coats, and festooned cords, with shoulder ornaments, thrown across the breast, are quite frequent.

Fitted capes are a pretty autumn novelty, which achieved immediate popularity. They are set high and gathered on the shoulders, are lined with silk, and often richly trimmed with beading or embroidery. Capes made entirely of feathers are a little too suggestive of the primitive man or woman to become popular. In silk plush they are beautiful.

A Belle's Account of Bathing at the Seaside.

But what coolness, and freshness, and liveness, when you come out! I always feel sinuous, like a snake; not as if I had hard bones, but only flexible, massive muscle. Bathing makes people graceful, I think, by the sense of suppleness it induces. How natural the story of the mermaid is! As children, we used to say that hairs left in the water became water-snakes; and I am sure if I were left in the water alive long enough I should taper off into a fish. As long as the brine is in my skin I perfectly understand the smooth sinuosity of piscatory motion.

I think these things and laugh while Marie brushes my hair after the bath. I have a novel in my hand, to be sure; but I think of the novel in which I am living, and of which I am one of the characters. Then I take a little nap—yes, a morning nap in the sea air after a bath is the very balm of roses. Just try it. When I wake, Marie, who has brushed my hair already takes it from under the cap and dresses it. There are girls here who positively have it dressed immediately after brushing and without the nap; and at dinner they wonder where I

Cut thin a slice of bread, and toast it on both sides; cut off the crust, spread the hot mince upon it, heaping it high in the middle.

GENUINE HOT SLAW.—Chop half a small cabbage very fine; put in a saucepan half a teaspoonful of vinegar, half a teaspoonful of salt, and the same quantity of pepper, one well-beaten egg, a piece of butter the size of a nut, three-quarters of a tablespoonful of sugar; stir well; when it begins to thicken pour in cabbage, and cook until the cabbage is tender, stirring all the time to prevent burning.

How Long Twenty Seconds may Seem to be.

At the trial in New York, of Eugene A. Mouille, a bartender, for shooting Chris Moore, a gambler, Mr. Morriac, a bookkeeper in the Fourth National Bank, was asked what time elapsed between the striking of Mouille by Moore and the shooting of the latter.

"It all occurred in about two minutes."

"Are you sure?" asked Judge Gilderleeve.

"Yes."

"Now," continued the Judge, as he took out his gold watch and gazed at its face, "I've got my watch, and will time you. Recall the circumstances and tell me when you think the shot was fired, fixing this moment as the time of the first blow."

The audience and jury waited while the witness sat silent.

"Now!" he cried, after an interval.

"Just twenty seconds," said the Judge, looking at the watch. "I congratulate you upon your accuracy. Your's only a minute and two-thirds out of the way. Witnesses say in court repeatedly that certain things take two or three minutes when really it is only about ten seconds. They forget how long a time two minutes is. A horse can run a mile in two minutes."—[New York Sun.]

Autumn Leaves.

It is stated by those who ought to know that the autumn coloring of the leaves of the maple, oak and other trees on the American Continent is not due to the action of frost, but to certain chemical changes which accompany the ripening of the leaves. American maples taken over to Europe will perfect their foliage for a few years—that is, the brilliant coloring will be put on—but they rapidly lose the habit, and in a few years the leaves will fall from the trees while still green, according to the habit of the European species. As children, we used to say that hairs left in the water became water-snakes; and I am sure if I were left in the water alive long enough I should taper off into a fish. As long as the brine is in my skin I perfectly understand the smooth sinuosity of piscatory motion.

I think these things and laugh while Marie brushes my hair after the bath. I have a novel in my hand, to be sure; but I think of the novel in which I am living, and of which I am one of the characters. Then I take a little nap—yes, a morning nap in the sea air after a bath is the very balm of roses. Just try it. When I wake, Marie, who has brushed my hair already takes it from under the cap and dresses it. There are girls here who positively have it dressed immediately after brushing and without the nap; and at dinner they wonder where I get my color and spirit.—Boston Globe.

A Foolish "Dare" that Resulted in a Wedding.

Quite a party of girls were at the station, Delaware Water Gap Railway, one day awaiting the arrival of the evening train, when, in a spirit of mischief, one of them dared the gayest of the party, a girl from Pittsburgh, to rush up behind some new arrival, seize him by the arm, and exclaim, "Oh, George! I'm so glad to see you!" The lady "took the dare," as the saying is, and, selecting a good-looking fellow, went through the programme; but by the time the words were uttered her confusion was so genuine that the gentleman really thought she had mistaken him for some other person. He accepted her stammering apologies, watched her take the bus for home, and took the same route himself. The next morning they met at breakfast, a most unromantic meal; but Cupid had done his work, and a mutual liking ensued, which several weeks of constant companionship strengthened, and now they are discussing trousseaus and marriage bells.

Mouille, a bartender, for shooting Chris Moore, a gambler, Mr. Morriac, a bookkeeper in the Fourth National Bank, was asked what time elapsed between the striking of Mouille by Moore and the shooting of the latter.

"It all occurred in about two minutes."

"Are you sure?" asked Judge Gildersleeve.

"Yes."

"Now," continued the Judge, as he took out his gold watch and gazed at its face, "I've got my watch, and will time you. Recall the circumstances and tell me when you think the shot was fired, fixing this moment as the time of the first blow."

The audience and jury waited while the witness sat silent.

"Now!" he cried, after an interval.

"Just twenty seconds," said the Judge, looking at the watch. "I congratulate you upon your accuracy. Your's only a minute and two-thirds out of the way. Witnesses say in court repeatedly that certain things take two or three minutes when really it is only about ten seconds. They forget how long a time two minutes is. Autumn Leaves.

It is stated by those who ought to know that the autumn coloring of the leaves of the maple, oak and other trees on the American Continent is not due to the action of frost, but to certain chemical changes which accompany the ripening of the leaves. American maples taken over to Europe will perfect their foliage for a few years—that is, the brilliant coloring will be put on—but they rapidly loose the habit, and in a few years the leaves will fall from the trees while still green, according to the habit of the European species. Mr. T. Meehan, the well-known Philadelphia horticulturist, now says that in the New Jersey marshes there are many trees of European species which, though failing to color their leaves at their home, manage to put on the most brilliant hues here. He also mentions from his knowledge that, in some parts of this country, imported European trees do not assume the autumn colors for several generations.

Combinations of brocade and shot glaze are very fashionable.

OHIO.—The temperance workers in the State of Ohio have not been successful in obtaining a majority for the prohibitory amendment to the State constitution. The vote polled in its favor was so large, however, as to plainly indicate that the day is not far distant when prohibition will be a law in that State. We have not yet seen the exact figures, but the vote polled for the amendment was something like 310,000 out of a total available vote of 709,335. Of course the temperance people will be encouraged to persevere, and those engaged in the liquor interests will have timely warning to stand from under. The whole question has been so thoroughly agitated that matters will not long stand in their present shape.

"Fast and Loose."

Reader, do you know what that term means, or are you intending to come to Canada? If so, I will tell you. In order to thoroughly find out and appreciate the technicalities of the term it is necessary that you should be of a convivial disposition, and drink and treat the "boys" whom you will find in plenty around each bar. Soon you will have a reputation, which is the commencement of the "game." In order more fully to follow out the working, suppose some kindly disposed fellow goes into an hotel at any port of entry and treats a stranger or two: he will soon find himself acquainted with the leaders of the "dogs," who in turn gamble with the "farmers." These "farmers" and their gangs of "painters, whitewashers, and builders" follow every new arrival in order to work him, and when well "worked" the victim will find himself "given away" to the D. D. s of either the U. S. or of Canada for them to have the picking of his bones or whatever is left, to make the most of. On leaving by the cars, these thugs follow him, and by the time he arrives at his destination he finds himself simply notorious. Then comes in the harvest of the "farmer," for now they have to sell him, so while some are spreading their reports and betting against him in the city, the others alternately watch the house, or secure rooms close by, and then in succession begins the history of the victim, such as had been gathered, interspersed by crimes attributed that had no existence. "If we don't take him we'll kill him" is a favorite expression. "He's got money and the N. Y. D. D. s will give $1,000 for him" is another. "Who is he, anyway? lay for him in a gang. He's sold; no, he isn't, he's straight, you bet. He's sold. What am I going to do about all I've laid out? I've been after this thing over six months," with other expressions covering every possible act. Reiterating such things constantly, no wonder it plays considerably on the nerves of a man trying to brace himself up from a spree, or steady his nerves already high strung and imaginative to the last degree. Is it any wonder, then, that men of weak nerves rush off to the Mayor's office and claim protection as we constantly see and hear of them doing? For the traps that are set for young and old who are ever noticed taking a glass or two of spirits are something indescribable. A visit to two or three saloons and partaking but of liquor, without even an association with the crowd, is enough. A reputation is secured and your ruin has commenced. So beware before you start, both young and old, of the consequences you incur by drinking liquor in Canada and allowing the "dogs," "thugs" and "farmers" to play fast and loose.

Meat.

The value of meat as a food is due in a degree to its heat-producing properties, though in this respect it is surpassed by fatty and amyloid substances. It is as a tissue building material, and as an excitant of assimilative changes in the tissues, both with regard to itself and to non-nitrogenous foods, that it is most useful. It is stimulant as well as nutritive, and it therefore holds a deservedly high place in the daily dietary. Experiment has shown that three quarters of a

MISCELLANEOUS.

There must have been some very aggravated cases of selfishness and perversity before the C. P. R. Syndicate could issue an order against turning over seats in the cars or taking parcels in beside the passengers. Of course such a thing is all nonsense and can't stand.

Shaw, the missionary in Madagascar seems to have been shamefully used by the French authorities. The two Governments are discussing the question of how much compensation is to be given to him, and well they may. It is said that the French Admiral must have been off his base.

It is said that there is wonderful activity in the English Government ship yards. Whatever is the meaning of that? Is there to be war or what? Perhaps the world is not ready as yet for the absolute cessation of war, but the nearer it gets to it the better. It is a poor coarse, butcherly way of setting disputes at the best.

King Death very provokingly stepped in and forbade the banns of marriage the other day. Earl Mountcashel having attained the ripe age of 91 was about to be married to a young girl yet in her teens. The Grisly Terror plainly did not approve of the match, and broke it up unceremoniously, chuckling to himself, no doubt, over the way in which he had blasted the girl's ambitious hopes. He might have waited at least until she had fairly become the Countess Mountcashel.

Some people are dreadfully hard on "only sons." Poor fellows, they are said to be selfish, vain, and intolerably cocky. If they have two or three doting sisters matters are said to be even worse. Their will must always be law. They are coddled and petted out of all reason. The girl is to be pitied who gets one of them for a husband. She will find a great big baby on her hands instead of a man, a selfish, over-grown, blubberous schoolboy, instead of a husband she can love, honor and obey. Is all that so? In many cases it is to be feared it is. Still, we have known very passable "only sons."

So the Queen, poor woman, is bothered not only with getting up statues to John Brown, but with excessive gambling in Royal palaces. She would not object to the latter evil in moderation. But the play is quite too awfully wicked, and the stakes quite too awfully high. How is the happy medium to be hit upon? If the thing is right one surely can't have too much of it. If wrong per se why have a little? The servant girl's illegitimate child was so small that she thought it was not worth making a fuss about. Others had quite a different idea. Gambling is gambling whether the stakes are for coppers or continents, and if even the Queen sanction it so far it is to be feared she will have to let it have free course.

The value of meat as a food is due in a deamyloid substances. It is as a tissue build-tive changes in the tissues, both with regard to itself and to non-nitrogenous foods, that it is most useful. It is stimulant as well as nutritive, and it therefore holds a deservedly high place in the daily dietary. Experiment has shown that three-quarters of a pound of lean meat fairly represents the quantity per diem which, taken with other less nitrogenous matter, suffices to maintain a person of average size and weight in a normal state of health. Some there are who largely exceed this standard, eating freely of meat at every meal, and living all the time quiet, sedentary lives. Such carnivorous feeders sooner or later pay a penalty by suffering attacks of gout or other disorders of indulgence. But is it equally important to note that many others, especially women, healthy in all points but for their innutrition, are apt to err as far on the other side. Thus one meets with people who consume about a pound of butcher's meat in a week, or not even that. The fact has been fully brought out by Dr. Graily Hewitt, in his address to the Obstetrical Section at the recent meeting of the British Medical Association. He has likewise with much probability assigned this defect of diet

as the chief cause of that general "weakness" which is so common among the au-tecedents of uterine displacement. The experience of many practitioners will confirm his observation. Different causes are at work to produce this kind of overfeeding—too rigid domestic economy, theoretical prejudices, the fastidious disinclinations for food which comes of a languid indoor life without sufficient bodily exercise, tight lacing perhaps, and many more. These difficulties are all more or less removable, unless, indeed, where absolute poverty forms the impediment. No effort should be spared to remove them. The advantages derived from a diet containing a fair amount of solid animal food could not be obtained from a purely vegetable or milk regimen without either unnecessarily burdening the digestive system with much surplus matter, or, on the other hand, requiring such revolutionary changes as to quantity and quality of food and times of eating as would probably altogether prevent its general adoption, even were that desirable, into household management. In our opinion, such changes are not desirable, as being inadequate to secure their purpose.—Lancet.

It Looked That Way.

At one of the Northern depots lately an old lady, whom an inward train had just deposited, timidly approached a brakes-man and asked if he knew whereabouts on said the railroad man. "Oh! he's been

The new "Hour" standard adopted by the Time Convention which met in Chicago lately will be a blessing to all travellers.
There will be three "times," eastern, central and mountain. Trains from New Brunswick as far as the meridian of Detroit will be run on "eastern" time; those from the Detroit line to nearly the western line of Kansas on "central" time, while those from the last point to a line between Nevada and Utah will be run on "mountain" time.
The full measure of the value of such an arrangement can be appreciated when it is remembered that hitherto in places like Buffalo for example, some trains run on Buffalo time, others on New York, others on Philadelphia, others on Columbia, others on Detroit and others on Hamilton time.

There is quite a number of things which many people do, about which there ought to be a very emphatic "Don't." We would like to let our readers have the benefit of a few of those "Don'ts." "Don't" go with your hands in your pockets. "Don't" cleanse your ears or your nose or trim or clean your finger-nails in public. "Don't" chew tobacco. It is a bad and ungentemanly proceeding. "Don't" expectorate.
It is not needed, and is simply a bad habit.
"Don't" whistle in the streets. "Don't"
blow your nose in the presence of others,
especially "don't" with your fingers.
"Don't" gape or cough or sneeze in public.
The misery is how can you help it sometimes? "Don't" be over familiar. "Don't"
in any case offer to shake hands with a lady.
The initiative must always come from her.
Perhaps this will be enough of "Don'ts" for one week. There is another which had better be added. "Don't" scold your children or your servants before other people. It looks bad.

The New Governor-General will soon be here. It is to be hoped that he will fulfil the highest expectations formed of him.
This is very seldom done, but it may in this case. We sincerely trust that it will. Some may not be quite sure if Canada need to import her chief magistrate, but so long as she does she ought to have the genuine article of its kind. It takes a wise man to manage Canadians to purpose. If Lansdowne fancy the little clique which is understood to constitute society at Ottawa, is the genuine representative of all that is cultivated and correct in Canada, he will be woefully mistaken, that is all. His Lordship has a fine opportunity for showing his "broad sympathies," and his possession of the inestimable characteristic called by Dr.
Chalmers, the prosperous management of human nature. Some men are such donkeys with their supercilious air and sniffing

"Abner?" said the railroad man. "Oh! he's been changed about considerable lately. He fired the John Edward till she ditched the graves and he got stove in. When he came out they gave him the O.K. for a while, then he broke the two-eight passenger till she jumped a know nothing, and he got pinched somewhere, and now I believe he's spare round the yard. You see he's had hard luck." The old lady stood speechless for a moment as if trying to digest the idioms of the railroad, and then said softly, as if at a hazard, that she "thought he had."

SOUND THEOLOGY.—Gladstone says that one of the most encouraging signs of the times is that the ministers are becoming aroused to the importance of the temperance work. Many of the leading dignitaries are becoming more and more outspoken. Recently Bishop Ireland of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Minnesota said:—"The need of the hour is a grand tidal wave of total abstinence sweeping over the land. The strongest protest possible must be made against intemperance. Total abstinence is the protest. Will it be made with sufficient force to save the people? This is the vital question for the future of America, and I might add, for the future of religion." We understand that a number of the bishops now require a pledge of total abstinence of those being confirmed.

Though the price of the N. Y. Herald is really only two cents, hundreds of people are willing to give three cents for it, the news vendors refusing to take any less. Naturally the Herald congratulates itself on being such a good paper that so many will give a half more than its real price for the privilege of reading it.

Some men are such donkeys with their supercilious air and sniffing idiocy. The country is new and the people both rough and democratic. It is as well when even Governor-Generals know how to manage the creature. So let it be with governors and all men in authority that their ways may be made plain and their reigns be rendered prosperous.

One hates to speak of it, but the truth of the matter is that every now and then agents are sent to Toronto and other places in Canada to decoy away young girls to lives of shame in Buffalo, Chicago and other American cities. In all probabilities the two women who abducted the girl Brougham from St. Catharines were of that kidney. Now we, of course, are too well trained to advocate any such thing as lynching, it is better to leave all that to the far Western States, and other rude half civilized places, but we can go this far with the greatest complacency and say that if lynching ever could be justified, then certainly the fiends in human form who could deliberately set about devilish work of that kind ought to be lynched without benefit of clergy. Be they male or female, a short shrift and a long rope is the right thing for them; any decent man could feel great pleasure in hauling on a rope himself in order to rid the world of such vermin; certainly no jury in the world could be found who would convict a man who shot stone dead one of these creatures caught in the act of prosecuting their nefarious schemes. We must make Canada a hot place for such.

Poker has almost superseded whist in what might be called its special domain—the Cavendish club, St. Stephen's Green, Dublin; indeed, so popular has the American game become that Stephen's Green has been christened "Poker Flat."

LENNOX REFORM ASSOCIATION.

A meeting of the Lennox Reform Association has been called for Saturday next at the town hall, at 2 p. m., for the purpose of electing officers for the year and selecting a candidate for the approaching election for the House of Commons. A general invitation is extended to all Reformers to be present, and it is to be hoped that every polling sub-division in the county will be represented.

THE REFORM CANDIDATURE.

We observe that many of our contemporaries are desirous, very naturally, that Sir Richard Cartwright should be once more put in nomination for the county he represented so long. Should this be found expedient we feel assured that there would not be a Reformer in Lennox who would not rejoice heartily, but in the present crisis we feel equally strongly that the convention must act with a single eye to the interest of the party at large, and this demands imperatively that the choice should fall on the man who, all things considered, is most likely to carry the county at this juncture. Of this no man is more thoroughly aware than Sir Richard himself, and we speak with full knowledge of his sentiments when we say gave general satisfaction. He had no political sins to answer for. Then why did he shoulder Mr. Roe's sins by an alliance with him? 'Twere better for Mr. Uriah Wilson had he never lived (politically) at all than to have thrown away that life by so foolish a mistake.

For Mr. Pruyn, personally, we have the highest respect. He is a good citizen and a successful business man. But apart from his respectability and success in business—if such can be called a claim—Mr. Pruyn has no claim whatever upon the electors, nor does he show any marked adaptability for the position he seeks. He has never taken any interest in municipal matters nor has he ever served the public in this county in any capacity. It is for the electors to say whether they will overlook the past services of other men and give the highest office in their gift to one who has never done anything for them.

CURIOUS, VERY CURIOUS.

The Tory party of Lennox are now asking the support of the farmers and manufacturers of the county, claiming to be the advocates of the interests of both. How does it come that the Tory party has never, from the commencement of Confederation till today, selected either a farmer or a manufacturer as their candidate? Everybody else has been run after, and everybody else has been picked up, but the farmers and the manufacturers of the county have always been let severely alone by the Tory wire-pullers. The "ordinary men" have had enough attention when their votes were needed, and have been beslobbered enough, goodness knows, but they have been quite overlooked only at such trying moments. Intelligent farmers and manufacturers may do well enough for Reform candidates in a great agricultural constituency like Lennox. The Allison and Hawleys may answer for the "Grits" well enough, but the high-toned Tory party could not think of such a thing as picking up one of their wealthy, intelligent farmers! Oh, bless you, no! Men of "tone" are needed, such as the Roes, the Hoopers, the Elliots, or the Pruyns. The farmers and manufacturers are handy to have in the party ranks, simply because of the votes and influence they have, and they seem quite willing to be dragged at the coat tails of these same wire-pullers. How long will the farmers continue to allow themselves to be thus bamboozled?

ALL INNOCENT ALIKE.

truth was laid bare. The Tories talk as they like among each other about that kind of thing, but don't let us stuff us up with any such garbage. We want to take it in and we won't.

If Mr. Roe intends to go out in that direction in a few days in the direction of Mr. Pruyn, let him use his personal reputation so as to influence. Perhaps, however, it is as well to hint to those interested parties that they were expected to ask not less than a head for themselves. C. wanted worth two dollars a head should have more.

so long. Should this be found expedient we feel assured that there would not be a Reformer in Lennox who would not rejoice heartily, but in the present crisis we feel equally strongly that the convention must act with a single eye to the interest of the party at large, and this demands imperatively that the choice should fall on the man who, all things considered, is most likely to carry the county at this juncture. Of this no man is more thoroughly aware than Sir Richard himself, and we speak with full knowledge of his sentiments when we say that he entirely deprecates the idea of endangering the success of the party in this contest out of personal regard for himself. In our ranks, at any rate, there is neither jealousy nor dissension, nor is there one among the various candidates whose names have been mentioned who is not ready to stand loyally by the choice of the convention whomsoever it be.

The fight will be an obstinate and perhaps a desperate one, and though we have no doubt of the issue of an honest struggle, we have seen far too much of the methods our opponents do not scruple to employ not to know that even the sharp lesson they have been taught may not be sufficient to prevent a repetition of the same disgraceful tactics, with possibly the same result of a dear bought and very temporary triumph at the price of lasting ignominy and defeat.

It will be the duty of the Reformers of Lennox to do their utmost to frustrate such attempts in the first place and if need be to punish them in the second, and we do not doubt they will be found equal to the task.

Meantime it is, we venture to repeat, the plain and manifest duty of the convention to unite upon that man, whomever he be, who is most likely to succeed in the struggle now impending, and this duty we fully expect the convention will not hesitate to fulfill.

THE CONSERVATIVE CANDIDATE.

The Conservatives met in convention on Saturday last and nominated Mr. M. W. Pruyn as their candidate for the House of Commons in the approaching election. As we predicted last week the issue was Roe vs. anti-Roe and the result was that Mr. Roe "got badly left." He came out of the ordeal a thoroughly whipped man.

The contest was mainly between Mr. Pruyn and Mr. Uriah Wilson, the former getting 42 and the latter 30 votes, with a few scattering—complimentary, as it were, to old members of the party, such as Mr. J. J. Watson of Adolphustown. The choice was a surprise to many people—even the Conservatives themselves. It was the Elliotts, or the Pruyns. The farmers and manufacturers are handy to have in the party ranks, simply because of the votes and influence they have, and they seem quite willing to be dragged at the coat tails of these same wire-pullers. How long will the farmers continue to allow themselves to be thus bamboozled?

ALL INNOCENT ALIKE.

What injured innocents our ordinary Tory candidates are! In the case of our local M. P. it was shown that to secure his election the hands of a good many of the party were reeking with corruption. Cats were bought at $2 apiece and never called for; whiskey was profuse in blacksmith shops and sheds; and money was paid plentifully, and promised still more plentifully, but Mr. Roe did not hesitate to step in the witness box and swear that all this was without his knowledge and consent. He, dear innocent soul, was guileless of any corrupt thought—or at least that was his own version of the matter. When the election of our esteemed ex M.P. was brought into consideration it was as evident as noon day that the Roes and the Storrs were flying round, busy as bees, with their "little bills," representing $2, or $5, or $10, as the cases required, greasing the palms of those that needed greasing, but Sir John, dear man, begged for the privilege of going into the same witness box to swear that "these hands are clean" of any knowledge of the dirty work that had been done in his name, and for his purpose.

These worthy standard-bearers of the great Lennox Liberal Conservative Association may appropriately tell their tales of innocence and guilelessness to the marines, but it would be just as well to avoid telling them to any people less credulous.

One can easily understand the kind of obligations the country is under for laws regarding purity of elections, and for the suppression of the base political crimes of bribery and corruption, so long as the Tory party delights in torch-light processions over shop party victories as the election of the Hoopers, the Roes and the Macdonalds for Lennox. What a debt of gratitude is due by Canada to the philanthropic endeavors of the Tories of Lennox! Who does not wish them another "grand victory" in the coming election in view of their past achievements?

WHY THEY ARE MAD.

A very intelligent gentleman from a distance was visiting Napanee one day last week and to him one of the leading lights of the high-toned Conservative party unbosomed himself regarding the feeling of disgust that has sprung up in his breast in connection with Brother Roe and the late protest trial. What he claimed to be mad about was not that Roe made the twos and fives fly around so lively among his Salmon river friends for that he fully expected the

THE CONSERVATIVE GANDI- DATE.

The Conservatives met in convention on Saturday last and nominated Mr. M. W. Pruyn as their candidate for the House of Commons in the approaching election. As we predicted last week the issue was Roe vs. anti-Roe and the result was that Mr. Roe "got badly left." He came out of the ordeal a thoroughly whipped man.

The contest was mainly between Mr. Pruyn and Mr. Uriah Wilson, the former getting 42 and the latter 30 votes, with a few scattering—complimentary, as it were, to old members of the party, such as Mr. J. J. Watson of Adolphustown. The choice was a surprise to many people—even to Conservatives themselves. It was well known that from the date of the unseating of Sir John Macdonald to Saturday last Mr. Uriah Wilson had been canvassing for the nomination and received the support of Mr. Roe and his satellites. It was thought by many that Mr. Roe still retained his hold on the party and would carry his man through all right, but it would seem that those who entertained this idea counted without their hosts. In the convention Mr. Roe found a solid phalanx of the stalwart members of the party arrayed against him and any candidate whose cause he espoused. The result was that Mr. Wilson did not get a majority of votes, which he can attribute solely to his intimacy with Mr. Roe. One would have thought that Mr. Wilson with his natural shrewdness would have seen that the adverse tide had set in and that the "Boss" was practically dethroned, and would have fought shy of so unpopular an advocate. In not doing so he made a fatal mistake. Against Mr. Wilson, personally, the convention could make no objection. He is a self-made man of more than ordinary intelligence. As Warden of the County and member of the Town Council he needed greasing, but Sir John, dear man, begged for the privilege of going into the same witness box to swear that "these hands are clean" of any knowledge of the dirty work that had been done in his name, and for his purpose.

These worthy standard-bearers of the great Lennox Liberal Conservative Association may appropriately tell their tales of innocence and guilelessness to the marines, but it would be just as well to avoid telling them to any people less credulous.

A very intelligent gentleman from a distance was visiting Napanee one day last week and to him one of the leading lights of the high-toned Conservative party unbosomed himself regarding the feeling of disgust that has sprung up in his breast in connection with Brother Roe and the late protest trial. What he claimed to be mad about was not that Roe made the twos and fives fly around so lively among his Salmon river friends, for that he fully expected the man would do, and he did not sink in the estimation of those who had long known him on that account; but he was mad to find that these men only got two or three dollars apiece instead of ten dollars per head as the paymasters had been given to understand.

THE EXPRESS does not credit any such yarn as that about our M. P. P.; it does not believe that he charged the corruption fund ten dollars per head and then put the parties off with one-fifth of the amount! No, sir, don't try to tax our credulity with anything of the kind. We have heard some mean insinuations about the gentleman in question—some of them too mean to publish—but we only make mention of this statement for the purpose of saying we don't believe it. Mr. Roe has a high reputation to sustain and he has high aspirations of future honorable positions in the great "gentleman's party." He, no doubt, cheerfully enough greased the itching palms of several of his old acquaintances, in view of the fact that his aspirations were to serve the interests of his beloved country, but don't ask THE EXPRESS to believe that any of the money furnished him for such a work remained in his own hands until the whole

Wilson's candidature. Many of influenced by the same consideration were not so plain spoken as the Adolphustown. 'Twas ever thus trade has always been held in for the Tory party and ever will be. It is that the shoemaker should still last, but the liquor merchant shot to parliament. Queer, isn't it.

—We understand that one of them at the Tory convention raised the issue it would be necessary to nominate a good character or the EXPRESS would pick him up. We are glad to see that this is having a good effect upon the friends. They have for some time the elements which constitute choosing their leaders and any improvement in this respect is welcomed, even Grits. So the can go in for all that sort of thing deems expedient.

Tribute to Sir Richard Cartwright [London Advertiser.]

We observe that some of our countrymen favor Sir Richard Cartwright as a probable candidate for Lennox. We think the suggestion will meet with the approval of the constituency. Sir Richard is able and honest, and is much needed in parliament. Lennox was never as well represented as when Sir Richard sat for the constituency, and now that the times are so trying, critical, and charlatanry has become the order of the day, an effort should be made by the constituency to secure the return of a man of ability and experience to fill vacancies as they occur. Mr. Jones of Halifax, Mr. L. A. Ton of Montreal, and Mr. Anglin are all needed.

THE VIEW OF A TEMPERANCE CONSERVATIVE.

(To the Editor of THE EXPRESS.)

DEAR SIR:—I am one of the many Conservatives who received the report of last Saturday's convention with disappointment and alarm. If the committee of nomination had been called together for the purpose of inflicting the most serious blow upon the party, and had the delegates tried to their utmost their ingenuity in order to devise the most effectual method of preventing scores of men, who never deserted their party, from voting on the Conservative side in the coming election, they could not have adopted a safer course. For years in this county there has been going on a great temperance agitation. Lennox has been throughout the country looked upon as the prohibition battle field. And now, when nearly all the counties are roused to action and there is the prospect, if we are but true to our principles, of the realization of our hopes at no distant day, the great Conservative party, in the very centre of the moral conflict and in the heart of the struggle, has imposed upon it, as its standard-bearer, the most extensive dealer in liquor, resident in our vicinity. Such a choice is truly unaccountable. If the political parties in the House of Commons were well high evenly balanced, and the present nominee was the only man who could carry the party vote, while that would not justify the choice, it would, nevertheless, render the action of the convention more easily understood. But the party is strong. On every question now before parliament of a purely political character there is the guarantee of an immense majority. But temperance is not a political question, at least it is not a party question. Such legislation as we now have has been secured by the united action of the friends of reform on both sides of the Speaker; and our hope, in regard to the future, is in men, who at war on matters of policy in governmental, are sworn allies for the promotion of this paramount question of the day. It has become apparent to the Licensed Victuallers' Association—a society composed of men in all parts of the Dominion, who are engaged in the liquor business—that it is utterly in vain to expect that any government can openly assist them. The moral sentiment in the community is too strong for that. The policy, then, of this association, is to work with all parties, and to exert their influence in the caucuses and conventions of both sides of politics. As an Association, it matters nothing, whether Conservative or Reform, so long as their ends are accomplished. Lately there have been signs of great action in the camp of the Victuallers, and aroused by the wonderful progress the cause of humanity is making they have met in council and resolved upon a desperate attack during the next session of Parliament. Vast sums of money are collected, and agents are at work in all parts. Last Saturday's choice has inspired the enemy's courage, and should the county sanction the selection and elect for Parliament one who is engaged in the liquor traffic it will be a great triumph for whisky, and a cause of humiliation and disgrace to men and women who are tailors and weavers for

THE R. C. CHURCH AT SHARBOT LAKE.

CONSECRATED ON SUNDAY LAST.

[From the Whig.]

As expected, the Sunday pilgrimage to Sharbot Lake in connection with the dedication of St. James Roman Catholic Church, was largely attended, in spite of this being the second within a few months to the same place, with only a difference in the ceremonies. It was, however, another of those popular testimonials to Father Twohey, which it gives Roman Catholic citizens pleasure to repeat. This zealous young priest, as Chairman of Separate Schools, Chancellor of the Diocese, Chaplain at the Penitentiary, priest in the Cathedral and House of Providence in regular service, was so regarded as loaded with work that it was a surprise when he undertook also mission work in North Frontenac, where the administrations of all the churches have been badly needed. For many months he had visited the scattered homes of churchmen in all weathers, holding services occasionally, that none should lack his sacraments. That his laborious visits and pleasant manners are appreciated cannot be doubted, since many have now seen most affectionate greetings and demonstrations of gratitude from his new parishioners. This spring Father Twohey resolved to venture upon the erection of a church, and the people of the district subscribed very liberally out of their very limited means. The parishioners of Kingston, Loughboro' and Bedford, supplemented by handsome gifts from the railroad contractors operating in the section, made handsome offerings in cash. In May the corner stone was laid, and within three months mass has been held. Father Twohey's energy had again borne rapid fruit. People do not realize the weight of such work because the railroad has brought it near home, but there is as laborious, as trying, as zealous work done in the rough, sparsely settled regions of North Frontenac—by Anglican, Presbyterian, Methodist and Roman alike—as in many foreign lands, missions too which are surrounded with all the romance and sacrifice the mind can picture. The experience of any week in winter will easily provide the proof of this.

The weather was charming, the trip a delightful one, none too cool. The Administrator of the Diocese, Monsignore Farrelly, headed the party, which at almost every station received large accessions. The train's arrival at Sharbot Station was preceded by over 200 visitors from the North as far as Calabogie, whither Frank Cicolari had gone to take charge of the excursion. A still larger crowd would have come but for a kindred ceremony taking place in Ottawa Diocese and dividing attention. More visitors could not have been accommodated in the Church, and a greater crowd might have led to disappointment. All that happens is for the best, as says the good old maxim. St. James' is a neat brick church with lofty ceiling, well ventilated and lighted. Its site is a high and beautiful one commanding a long view of the lake in front and rear, and overlooking the village completely. Almost alongside stands the Presbyterian Church, an evidence of still more rapid progress, as it has grown into form and been dedicated

Speaker; and our hope, in regard to the future, is in men, who at war on matters of policy in government, are sworn allies for the promotion of this paramount question of the day. It has become apparent to the Licensed Victuallers' Association—a society composed of men in all parts of the Dominion, who are engaged in the liquor business—that it is utterly in vain to expect that any government can openly assist them. The moral sentiment in the community is too strong for that. The policy, then, of this association, is to work with all parties, and to exert their influence in the caucuses and conventions of both sides of politics. As an Association, it matters nothing, whether Conservative or Reform, so long as their ends are accomplished. Lately there have been signs of great action in the camp of the Victuallers, and aroused by the wonderful progress the cause of humanity is making they have met in council and resolved upon a desperate attack during the next session of Parliament. Vast sums of money are collected, and agents are at work in all parts. Last Saturday's choice has inspired the enemy's courage, and should the county sanction the selection and elect for Parliament one who is engaged in the liquor traffic it will be a great triumph for whisky, and a cause of humiliation and disgrace to men and women, who are toiling and praying for the cause of temperance. When legislation on guarding temperance comes before Parliament we will have no vote in the matter. The Constitution states the method whereby we can speak, viz: through the man sent to Parliament by us. If then the question of temperance is unsurpassed in importance, how many are prepared to allow to vote for them, and to accept his vote—which every man must do who supports him—a man whose money and worldly interests are so largely absorbed by the liquor business? No Good Templar can vote for a seller of liquor without violating his solemn obligation; nor can any member of any temperance organization. And there is an obligation incomparably higher than any worldly organization imposes, which I would fain hope would restrain any Christian man from attempting to place at the disposal of the Licensed Victuallers any additional weapons which they can use to accomplish our defeat. I would suggest three methods whereby the danger threatening may be averted; first, let the convention re-assemble and again consider its decision. If this will not be allowed by those who have charge of the wires, then in the event of the opposite party bringing forward a temperance man, rally to his support. But if no opportunity be afforded for either of these courses being taken, let all temperance men on the Conservative side refuse to participate in the campaign. Some who are mainly responsible for the present unfortunate state of affairs are ridiculing the right of temperance sentiment in the county. "Suppose," said the chief of the manipulators, "a few of the cracked brained and ranting temperance men desert us (meaning thereby the men who zealously and consistently labor in the cause) we shall more than meet the loss by the recruits from the other side, for all the dealers in liquor and friends of the business, regardless of politics and friendship, will unitedly stand by their champion. Only a few men will leave us, the bulk are good loyal Conservatives and will not trouble themselves about so trifling

THE CEREMONIAL.

The ceremony of consecration was performed about 12 o'clock within and without by Monsignore Farrelly, the procession around the outside of the Church being composed of the Bishop, priests and acolytes, followed by St. Mary's Cathedral choir, of Kingston, chanting the invocations. Upon the admission of the people High Mass was celebrated, with Father McWilliams as priest, and Fathers Twohey and Spratt as Deacons. Father McWilliams had done a deal of laborious service in North Frontenac prior to Father Twohey's visits, and none could more fittingly perform the first mass. The selection was Millard's Mass in G, which is interspersed with a number of beautiful solos and duets. Prof. Des Rochers presided at the organ with his accustomed ability. The sermon was an eloquent, chaste deliverance of Father Stanton, of the adjoining parish of Westport and Bedford, and also made an impression. For an offering of $460 was made

Only a few men will leave us, the bulk are good loyal Conservatives and will not trouble themselves about so trifling a matter at such a time as this. They only feel it their duty to pray about it, and speak about it but no fear of them being so fanatical as to carry their views into this struggle." Let temperance men resent the imputation, and vindicate their character, and if the party candidate be defeated it will only be a temporary reverse and Liberal Conservatism will be stronger than ever and will make many friends. It is well known that this is a Conservative county and if the party is united it can elect whom it will. Well, then, should the men in the party who profess to be interested in the moral welfare of the community refuse to be driven into supporting a liquor seller, by a certain clique, the effect will be an immense advantage to the cause. It is basely insinuated that Conservatives will, in this county, vote for any man, no matter whom he may be, if he is the nominee of the party! Now is the time to hurl back the insinuation in the face of those who dare make it and to demonstrate that a man whose business is destroying our people cannot sit in Parliament as the representative of this enlightened and Christian county.

A CONSERVATIVE.

Napanee, Oct. 31, 1883.

* "Little thanks are due to him who only gives away what is of no use to himself." The thanks of invalids the world over are being showered upon the inventor of Kidney-Wort, for it is giving health to all. Kidney-Wort moves the bowels regularly, cleanses the blood and radically cures kidney disease, gravel, piles, bilious headache, and pains which are caused by disordered liver and kidneys. Thousands have been cured—why should you not try it.

A Wonderful Result.

A single bottle of Dr. Low's Pleasant Worm Syrup has frequently destroyed from 100 to 200 worms. It is pleasant to take—no other cathartic being required. Tape worms have also been removed by it, of 15 to 35 feet in length. It is effectual for all varieties of worms afflicting both children and adults.

The sermon was an eloquent, chaste deliverance of Father Stanton, of the adjoining parish of Westport and Bedford, and also made an impression, for an offering of $460 was made immediately, including $100 from Hugh Ryan, the contractor, and $50 from P. Browne, Kingston. The Church will cost over $4,500.

Monsignore Farrelly, in the name of the Church, thanked all who had assisted in building a church so creditable to the diocese, to the benefactors, to Father Twohey and to his scattered parishioners. He was aware of the sacrifices made and prayed for a continued blessing upon their labors.

AN INTERESTING CONCLUSION.

Father Twohey announced several banns of marriage, the service on the following Sunday, and the obligations of All Saints' and All Souls' Days, and as a concluding ceremony called before the altar Martin Cannon and Margaret Tradrau, who were united and received a fervent blessing for a happy future of the first union consummated in the new church. Dinner was partaken of at Perry's Hotel. The Sisters of the House of Providence decorated the altar on Saturday. The organ sent out broke down, and the Presbyterian Church authorities showed good fellowship by lending theirs for the service.

Humbled Again.

I saw so much said about the merits of Hop Bitters, and my wife, who was always doctoring and never well, teased me so urgently to get her some, that I concluded to be humbugged again; and I am glad I did, for with less than two month's use of Hop Bitters, my wife was cured, and she has remained so for eighteen months since. I like such humbugging.—H. T., St. Paul.—Pioneer Press.

Bad Drainage.

There is nothing more productive of disease in a neighborhood than bad drainage. Open the culverts and sluiceways and purify the locality. The obstructions in the human system may be remedied in a similar manner by Burdock Blood Bitters, which opens all the outlets of disease through the Bowels, Liver, and Kidneys.

We have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated
Essay on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc., resulting from cesses.
Price, in a sealed envelope only 6 cents, or two postage stamps.
The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay,
clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of intestinal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at onesimple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be,
may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.
This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

The Workman's Song.

BY CLARENCE A. FONERDEN.

I will write the songs of the workingman.

And I'll sing them, too, for am I not one?

Yea, I belong to the brotherhood.

And I'll work and sing till the work be done,

Till the whole be finished, spick and span,

And rounded off in the homely shop,

Where honest toil and sweet content

Give Life and Time their noblest prop.

Then, comrades, come, and sing with me,

To the end of the toilsome, weary days;

Blend our songs with the din of work

Till the whole world join in labor's praise;

With the hammer's twang and shovels' thud,

And the steaming engine's whistle shrill,

Let the song of the workingman be heard

Till the heavens and earth with the echoes

fill

To the plow, to the plane, in field or in shop,

Go we to the task with a merry song,

And the toil and moil shall be all made sweet

To the heart and hand of the working throng.

And anon when brawn and brain unite

In God and Nature's righteous plan,

The world shall give all honor due

To the honest, upright workingman.

Who tills the ground with his own right hand,

And makes his bread with the might of

brawn,

Shall awake from slumber's sweet repose

Refreshed and blest on the morrow's dawn;

Who rings the ax and whirrs the saw,

As rightly becometh he who can,

Proclaims to the world in his homely way,

There is honor due to the workingman.

The manliest men on earth to-day

Are they who work and still rejoice;

Who well life's brunt and burden bear

And hymn its praise with grateful voice;

Each treads the earth as a noble man,

God's likeness in his honest face,

And shall in the whited light of time

In the rank of heroes take his place.

JANET'S LOVE.

BY LOUISE ALEXANDER.

Mr. Angus Loring paused in the midst of his solitary breakfast to meditate gloomily on the contents of a letter before him.

"A comfortable life I shall lead," he soliloquized, as he pushed back his chair and strode back and forth the room. "A pleasant life it will be, with a dancing, prancing girl, let loose about the house, and eternally jingling 'La Fille de Madame Angot,' on my Erard piano. I wish to heaven, Arthur Lynde or I had been at the bottom of the Red Sea, before he induced me to become the guardian of his daughter."

From which misanthropic utterances, it may very readily and slightly be inferred that Mr. Angus Loring was a bachelor. Certainly there was nothing very prepossessing about this gentleman's tall, spare figure, and gray eyes, that were cold and searching; evidently his was a nature without tenderness or sentiment. In fact, Mr. Loring was a solitary man, who sought no companionship, male or female; whose one passion was music—his idol, literature. Not a very congenial spirit then, it may be imagined, for a young school-girl, freshly recovered from a serious illness, which rendered a change of surroundings imperative, and further study impossible. Such was the necessity that was bringing Janet Lynde to the home her father had destined her, when he died. And Mr. Loring, who, when the prospect of taking her in charge had been in Copperfield, that I might remark with Mrs. Blimber, that if I could have known Dickens I should die happy, as I do not care particularly for an acquaintance with Cicero."

And Miss Lynde's eyes were raised demurely to his, and gave Mr. Loring his first opportunity to observe how exquisitely clear they were.

"On my word you remember something of what you read," commented her guardian, with an amused smile, as he folded his arms and surveyed with furtive criticism the small head, crowned with red brown hair that rippled into irrepressible waves and curls, while Miss Lynde diligently employed the pause by turning over the leaves of a magazine on the table before her. So Mr. Loring had time to reflect that it could not have been altogether timidity that hitherto had kept this dogmatic young lady silent. What then was it, unless a repugnance towards the man who buried her alive in his great silent house?

Mr. Loring came out of his reverie with a start, and consulted his watch. "I must not forget that I am going away," he said, with something very like a sigh; "it is impossible to say when I may be back—certainly not under a month. I have made arrangements with my cousin—an elderly but very agreeable lady—who has just returned from abroad, to remain with you in my absence; she will probably remain permanently, as some time ago, I asked her acceptance of a home here. Now I must insist on you having more society—more amusement in your life. Ask one of your old school comrades, or as many as you choose, to come, spend a month or two with you. Turn the house inside out, if you will. I make but one proviso, Janet—be glad to see me when I come back—it will be a new and delightful experience to have some one welcome me home."

As he finished, Mr. Loring held out his hand, and as Janet returned the clasp, she answered gayly: "You shall be obeyed sir, in every particular. Good-bye!"

As the door closed after her, involuntarily Mr. Loring sighed. It was impossible to hide from his penetrating eyes that she was glad he was going away, and indeed, as he argued impartially, why should she be sorry? Truly, there was nothing he had done to make either himself or his house so agreeable that she should be loath to part with either the one or the other. But when he returned, he decided it should be quite different. He would commence the careful study of this demure, charming little girl, whose reserved and yet ingenuous manner had stirred up strange feelings in his calm breast. Even in the midst of the important case that required his utmost vigilance and intellectual ability to bring to a favourable conclusion, the memory of that bright animated face and uplifted eyes haunted him. There were possibilities of intellect in that young ward of his, he reflected. How was it he had not found it out sooner? Here then would be a study more interesting, more satisfying than science, for she held the key as well as the index to the volume. So it was with great inward satisfaction that Mr. Loring round his case in the Supreme Court sooner reached, and more speedily concluded than he had thought possible, and amused and indulgent smile a tragic tone of dismay. "Why to enjoy yourself, with all the innocent heart." He had gone now of both her hands, and was into those haunting, limpid, what have you been doing with He asked presently, when the began to droop. "Has my co you well?"

"She has been very kind," answered, "and since Jessie can been to the opera twice, the Ar a reception. Oh! yes, I have deal of amusement since you we I am very glad that you are again."

Mr. Loring was restlessly paced down his flower-decked drawing his eyes upon the broad stair watching for the slight figure constantly in his thoughts. But black-robed young lady did. Instead there came gliding down full vision of tulle and silk—robe garlanded with snow-balls on her cheeks, and innocent brown eyes. Angus Loring felt a very impulse to take her in his balls and all, but instead, he arms, and viewed her with a criticism. Truly, she reminded him small, beautifully plumed bird, attire, and as he raised the hand to his lips said, "Janet, I have occasion to mourn lost the rest of my life; the chrysover, you have emerged a gay fly, that will soar away beyond when Janet would have any guests were announced, and Mitered upon the duties of her first hostess. A very successful party And Janet found herself in a lightful atmosphere. As if in heard herself uttering gayly knew that she was surrounded striving for her smiles and bright repartee. Even Miss Vinter in pink brocade, was not sought extent of this small youthful creature pure white robe. At length, the evening was over, with all its and pleasure, and even Miss Vinter appeared up stairs. Janet was when her guardian detained word. "It is needless to ask enjoyed yourself," he said kindly look at her pink cheeks and the of her eyes.

"How will you be able, Janet to the every-day dullness of you

"Oh! it has been very delightful Janet, gaily; "but one cannot to be always a holiday—" "Sage," answered her guardian gravely. "Nevertheless, I have test your philosophy. Suppose cousin to chaperone you into society rest of the winter? Ah! I would like it. Well then, something accomplished, but there is before the contract is ratified. From to-night you will come to study, confess your experience since whether peace be declared may very readily and slightly be inferred that Mr. Angus Loring was a bachelor. Certainly there was nothing very prepossessing about this gentleman's tall, spare figure, and gray eyes, that were cold and searching; evidently his was a nature without tenderness or sentiment. In fact, Mr. Loring was a solitary man, who sought no companionship, male or female; whose one passion was music—his idol, literature. Not a very congenial spirit then, it may be imagined, for a young school-girl, freshly recovered from a serious illness, which rendered a change of surroundings imperative, and further study impossible. Such was the necessity that was bringing Janet Lynde to the home her father had destined her, when he died. And Mr. Loring, who, when the prospect of taking her in charge had been in far perspective did not consider the idea so formidable, now turned in utter repugnance from the duty immediately before him. However, the arrival was yet a week off, and in the meantime Mr. Loring played his most intricate and classical music, as though to banish from his soul all memory of the disagreeable future.

It was in the twilight of a winter's afternoon that Mr. Loring's ward arrived, accompanied by the maid that had been sent to fetch her; and as her guardian received her with formal and punctilious courtesy, he had to admit that in exterior appearance, at least, there was nothing formidable about Janet Lynde. Very small and quiet she looked in her simple black dress, as she answered with monosyllables his words of greeting, and then asked permission to retire. And soon Mr. Loring began to discover, that the elements he had dreaded in his ward's nature were not forthcoming, and except that they met regularly at their breakfast and late dinner, it would have been difficult for Mr. Loring to remember there was a feminine presence in the house. Gradually there grew up in his mind an odd curiosity concerning this mute young person, who sat facing him at the table. Could it be possible, he speculated, that she was satisfied to live, solitary as himself, in a large house without human sympathy or companionship? Never yet had he found indications of sadness, or discontent disturbing the tranquility of her face, nor had he heard the tones of the obnoxious "Madame Angot" brought forth by the agency of those slim hands. How did the deft little fingers employ themselves? And what sweet serenity there was in the curves of her red lips! More than once Mr. Loring surprised a quickly suppressed smile, or a sudden flash of the dark eyes, and it had come to pass that the reserve which, at first, had been a source of self-gratulation to Mr. Loring, now gave away to a tantalized annoyance, as the days and the weeks went by, and found him no nearer understanding the unusual young person who still obeyed the precept of childhood, "to speak only when spoken too."

Coming home one day, much earlier than customary, Mr. Loring's steps were arrested on the threshold of his library by certain sounds issuing from behind the heavy oak door. Surely it was a woman's voice singing Beethoven's "Adelaide" in tones of purest, clearest soprano. How it thrilled Angus Loring's music-loving nature, as he listened to the liquid intonations and cautiously opened the door far enough to inspect the intruder within. There she was—different. He would commence the careful study of this demure, charming little girl, whose reserved and yet ingenuous manner had stirred up strange feelings in his calm breast. Even in the midst of the important case that required his utmost vigilance and intellectual ability to bring to a favourable conclusion, the memory of that bright animated face and uplifted eyes haunted him. There were possibilities of intellect in that young ward of his, he reflected. How was it he had not found it out sooner? Here then would be a study more interesting, more satisfying than science, for she held the key as well as the index to the volume. So it was with great inward satisfaction that Mr. Loring round his case in the Supreme Court sooner reached, and more speedily concluded than he had thought possible, and himself on the way home again. Hitherto he had always telegraphed for rooms to be aired, and preparations to be made for his arrival, but all these considerations were swallowed up now, in the prospect ahead, of a certain youthful person coming forward to meet him with words of welcome. Where should he find her? In the library where they had parted? No; there, all was silent and dreary, as it had been before her existence was remembered. The whole house was silent as a tomb, Mr. Loring soliloquized impatiently, while he mounted the stairs to his own apartments. His feet pressed the thick carpet noiselessly, and just then voices in conversation issued from a room, whose door was slightly ajar.

"So this is Mr. Angus Loring," said a strange voice, manifestly feminine, "Mr. Angular Loring would be more appropriate I should say, from the look of his picture; and such eyes! Why, Janet, I could almost fancy he was looking at me in the flesh. How you can make a hero out of such an old and ugly man, is beyond my conception."

Mr. Loring seated himself in an easy chair, just where he could see and hear unobserved, with a total indifference to the fate of eavesdroppers.

"At least, he has very good taste in furnishing his house," said the strange voice presently, from another quarter of the room. "These mantle ornaments are superb—but how you manage to get away with your time, is a mystery to me. It is certainly barbarous of your guardian to have kept you shut up in this great prison, away from all civilized society. Either he is very selfish, or you are remarkably precious to him."

"Indeed, I shall not let you run down Mr. Loring," interrupted Janet, with a certain sound of decision in her voice. "He is very kind to me, does not interfere with my time or the way I employ it, and even at school, Jessie, you know I was never gregarious. I have been quite engrossed, this winter in my painting and music. But you should hear Mr. Loring! Many a time, he would have been horrified to know that I was sitting on the stairs, listening to him play Beethoven's and Schuman's great works. You should hear him render the 'Moonlight Sonata'—You would never doubt but that he had a grand and noble soul." Mr. Loring nearly betrayed his presence, in an effort to see Miss Lynde's face, as she spoke those rapid and enthusiastic words. "Bad symptoms" said Miss Vinter, shaking her head astutely, with the air of a person who knew all about such matters. "And how old might the interesting man—enjoyed yourself," he said kindly, looking at her pink cheeks and the light of her eyes.

"How will you be able, Janet, to the every-day dullness of your life?" "Oh! it has been very dull," Janet, gaily; "but one cannot be to always a holiday—" "I am," answered her guardian gravely. "Nevertheless, I have tested your philosophy. Suppose your cousin to chaperone you into the rest of the winter? Ah! I would like it. Well then, the thing accomplished, but there before the contract is ratified, from to-night you will come to study, confess your experience, consider whether peace be declared, continued in the enemy's country they parted for the night.

Very speedily the quiet Mr. Loring was besieged with gallantries for receptions, reunions, and other amusements, and at last Janet came rapidly into innocent and happy looking sight. Those others, thought her guardian, there were moments when she snatched her away from all these things they had time to dim the first nature, or taste its sweetness. He set a guard upon his impulses, fast purpose, to be generous in life, he held dearer than his ally he withdrew himself to solitary evenings of music and study. It was more than he could witness the triumph of a man who had won the prize. Yet he could not but acknowledge young Marcelle—whose after marked, that he, as her guardian, constantly being asked when Miss Lynde to be married—he could not but that this young gentleman was suitable in age and fortune. But it was none the less his that reason, and Mr. Loring's disappointment in an access of proachableness, that was both inexplicable to Janet.

There was a light tap upon the door, where Mr. Loring sat, oring, but in reality speculative chance of Miss Lynde's remembrance agreement, entered into six months before.

cover, that the elements he had dreaded in his ward's nature were not forthcoming, and except that they met regularly at their breakfast and late dinner, it would have been difficult for Mr. Loring to remember there was a feminine presence in the house. Gradually there grew up in his mind an odd curiosity concerning this mute young person, who sat facing him at the table. Could it be possible, he speculated, that she was satisfied to live, solitary as himself, in a large house without human sympathy or companionship? Never yet had he found indications of sadness, or discontent disturbing the tranquility of her face, nor had he heard the tones of the obnoxious "Madame Angot" brought forth by the agency of those slim hands. How did the dainty little fingers employ themselves? And what sweet serenity there was in the curves of her red lips! More than once Mr. Loring surprised a quickly suppressed smile, or a sudden flash of the dark eyes, and it had come to pass that the reserve which, at first, had been a source of self-gratulation to Mr. Loring, now gave away to a tantalized annoyance, as the days and the weeks went by, and found him no nearer understanding the unusual young person who still obeyed the precept of childhood, "to speak only when spoken too."

Coming home one day, much earlier than customary, Mr. Loring's steps were arrested on the threshold of his library by certain sounds issuing from behind the heavy oak door. Surely it was a woman's voice singing Beethoven's "Adelaide" in tones of purest, clearest soprano. How it thrilled Angus Loring's music-loving nature, as he listened to the liquid intonations and cautiously opened the door far enough to inspect the intruder within. There she was—his ward—on the topmost round of the ladder, apparently selecting a volume from the well-filled shelf, while the melody of her song came as readily from her lips as a bird's notes. What a morsel she looked up there, and how delightful it would be to help her down from her high perch! At the thought Mr. Loring pushed open the door wide, and entered. The song ceased suddenly, and Janet's cheeks were flushed carnation pink, as she asked pardon for her intrusion, in the tones of a naughty child. Then, book in hand, she would have slipped away, but her guardian's voice arrested her at the door.

"By the way, Janet," he said, "do you never feel the need for more amusement in your life? You must find yourself very dull at times, I fancy."

"Not when there are such delightful books to be had," answered Janet, with a quick, bright smile, holding up the "Mill on the Floss;" "I do not even feel the necessity for some one to whom I might remark that solitude is a fine thing."

Mr. Loring's eyes flashed a delightful smile. Here was a young person who evidently read Balzac. He would further test her literary discernment.

"Sit down, and let me catechise you a bit, Janet," he said, as he handed a chair. "It's one of my beliefs that the great keynote of character is in one's choice of books. Of course, being a young lady, you do not like Dickens?"

"I have read every book of his twice over," said Janet, with the enthusiasm of youth; "indeed, so much did I like David

I should say, from the look of his picture; and such eyes! Why, Janet, I could almost fancy he was looking at me in the flesh. How you can make a hero out of such an old and ugly man, is beyond my conception."

Mr. Loring seated himself in an easy chair, just where he could see and hear unobserved, with a total indifference to the fate of eavesdroppers.

"Bad symptoms" said Miss Vinter, shaking her head astutely, with the air of a person who knew all about such matters. "And how old might the interesting monster be?" with youthful insouciance. "Jessie, I really will not listen when you speak of my guardian so disrespectfully." And Miss Lynde turned with offended dignity to the piano.

"Oh! very well," responded incorrigible Jessie, with a light laugh. "But here under his own fig-tree, Janet, I will predict, that you and the Angular being of your veneration will wind up, by getting married." But Miss Lynde had forthwith commenced, with great energy to play a polonaise of Schubert's, and there was a precision and firmness in the touch of those slender yet strong fingers, sufficient to surprise anew the man who for a year had lived in ignorance of the treasure, that his house had held.

"Mr. Loring!" The white hands came down with a crash on the ivory keys, in her surprise and consternation. "I am so sorry, I mean I am so glad to see you home again," with timidly extended hand, "Jessie, Miss Vinter this is my guardian, Mr. Loring." Rather a lame introduction, but Miss Vinter went through the ceremony of hand-shaking with great coolness, pursued a commonplace conversation for a few minutes, and then with a mischievous look at Janet, excused herself and withdrew.

"What will you think of me, Mr. Loring?" burst forth Janet, with almost deploring deprecation as soon as they were alone. "We are to have a party to-night, and music—what shall we do?" "What shall you do?" echoed her guardian with an himself, to witness the triumphant man who had won the prize. Yet he could not but acknowledge young Marcelle—whose attainment was constantly being asked when Mr. Loring was to be married—he could not but see that this young gentleman was suitable in age and fortune. But it was none the less a disappointment in an accessible, that was both inexplicable to Janet.

"How could you think with rapid utterance, and indignation. "Why, Mr. Marcelle, hardly more than a boy. He respects a man who has no pretensions, whose very ideas are unimpeachable. Of course it is impossible to love and not respect—"

"Logical as ever, I see, Janet," smiling quite easily.

"I may as well tell you, Janet," marked Janet, with an air of confidence, "that it is Jessie Vinton, who is anxious to marry, known just at present."

"Then Mr. Marcelle is disappointed, as I am concerned, Janet;" and with a magnanimity, "he is certainly a very able young gentleman, from what I have heard. Then more seriously; "Anything further to confide in me to ask or favor to request?"

"None whatever, sir," said Janet faintly.

amused and indulgent smile at her almost tragic tone of dismay. "Why promise me to enjoy yourself, with all the gaiety of your innocent heart." He had got possession now of both her hands, and was looking deep into those haunting, limpid eyes. "And what have you been doing with yourself?" He asked presently, when the long lashes began to droop. "Has my cousin treated you well?"

"She has been very kind," Janet answered, "and since Jessie came, we have been to the opera twice, the Art Gallery and a reception. Oh! yes, I have seen a great deal of amusement since you went away, but I am very glad that you are come home again."

Mr. Loring was restlessly pacing up and down his flower-decked drawing room, with his eyes upon the broad stairway beyond, watching for the slight figure that was now constantly in his thoughts. But the plain, black-robed young lady did not appear. Instead there came gliding down a wonderful vision of tulle and silk—her lustrous robe garlanded with snow-balls, fresh roses on her cheeks, and innocent delight in her brown eyes. Angus Loring felt a momentary impulse to take her in his arms, snow balls and all, but instead, he folded his arms, and viewed her with a pleased criticism. Truly, she reminded him of some small, beautifully plumed bird, in this new attire, and as he raised the slim, gloved hand to his lips said, "Janet, I fear I shall have occasion to mourn lost opportunities the rest of my life; the chrysalis state is over, you have emerged a gay young butterfly, that will soar away beyond me." And when Janet would have answered him, guests were announced, and Miss Lynde entered upon the duties of her first evening, as hostess. A very successful party it proved. And Janet found herself in a new and delightful atmosphere. As if in a dream she heard herself uttering gay speeches, and knew that she was surrounded by a throng striving for her smiles and bright words of repartee. Even Miss Vinter in her superb pink brocade, was not sought after to the extent of this small youthful creature in her pure white robe. At length, however, the evening was over, with all its excitements and pleasure, and even Miss Vinter had disappeared up stairs. Janet was going too, when her guardian detained her with a word. "It is needless to ask if you have enjoyed yourself," he said kindly, with a look at her pink cheeks and the brightness of her eyes.

"How will you be able, Janet, to go back to the every-day dullness of your life?" "Oh! it has been very delightful," said Janet, gaily; "but one cannot expect life to be always a holiday—" "Spoken like a sage," answered her guardian with amused gravity. "Nevertheless, I have a mind to test your philosophy. Suppose I ask my cousin to chaperone you into society for the rest of the winter? Ah! I see that you would like it. Well then, consider it a thing accomplished, but there is a provision, before the contract is ratified. Six months from to-night you will come to me, in my study, confess your experiences, and con-able of appreciating the gift, my consent shall not be wanting."

"You are very kind," said Janet, with great bitterness, "and if you are endeavoring to let me know, in a polite way, that you are tired of your position as my guardian, I can go away—back to school, any place you please, only I shall never marry, not even to please you," and suddenly Miss Lynde's lovely eyes brimmed over with tears and called into requisition a diminutive lace handkerchief.

Here was the spectacle of a woman in tears, a situation Mr. Loring had always provisionally abhorred. But could this be the cold and proud man who now so passionately and extravagantly entreated this tearful young lady to dry her eyes and weep no more?

"Pray, pray, don't cry," he besought her. "What have I said! Why should I want you to go away? Do you not know that from the hour I lose you, life will be a very desolate and empty affair to me? Have you not seen that I love you with all the force and fullness of a nature that love never before had reached? Janet, I had not meant to frighten or distress you, but I am not made of stone, child, that I can listen to such words when you should know that the treasure of your heart would make mine supremely happy."

And what did Janet answer to this rhapsody? A wondering gladness had slowly usurped the place of tears, and the large eyes raised to Angus Loring's face were beautifully tender.

"And you can really love me?" she whispered softly, as they stood there, face to face, beneath the clear glow of the chandelier. "You, so far above me in intellect and culture, can really love me? God has been very good to me." And the low voice was very reverent as it spoke these words.

"What is this you have said?" exclaimed her guardian, as he grasped Janet's hands in a strong pressure. "Tell me at once, that I was mistaken; that I am already ripe for my dotage, in the mad notion you would consent to marry me."

Surely there was nothing cold or searching now, in those long gray eyes, though there was an air of strongly enforced repression in his manner, as he uplifted the round chin, to gaze at the delicious mystery of Janet's face. But that was surely delighted, radiant happiness that curved those red lips in lines of infinite content. And what words were those he heard, so softly uttered, that he must hold her close to catch them?

"I shall never love any one but you, and if you will take so small and insignificant a creature to be your wife, I shall be unspeakably happy."

So Mr. Marcelle went alone to the opera that night, and presently the fashionable world received their wedding cards.

they parted for the night.

Very speedily the quiet mansion of Mr.
Loring was besieged with gay callers, and cards for receptions, reunions, and all manner of amusements, and at all these festivities Janet came rapidly into favor. How innocent and happy looking she was, beside those others, thought her guardian proudly.
There were moments when he longed to snatch her away from all these people, before they had time to dim the freshness of her nature, or taste its sweetness. But he had set a guard upon his impulses, in the steadfast purpose, to be generous to the young life, he held dearer than his own. Gradually he withdrew himself to the old quiet solitary evenings of music and literature.
It was more than he could bear—he told himself, to witness the triumph of another man who had won the prize he coveted.
Yet he could not but acknowledge that this young Marcelle—whose attentions were so marked, that he, as her guardian, was constantly being asked when Miss Lynde was to be married—he could not but concede that this young gentleman was entirely suitable in age and fortune, and character.
But it was none the less hard to bear for that reason, and Mr. Loring concealed his disappointment in an accession of unapproachableness, that was both alarming and inexplicable to Janet.

There was a light tap upon the library door, where Mr. Loring sat, ostensibly reading, but in reality speculating as to the chance of Miss Lynde's remembering a certain agreement, entered into between them
six months before.

"At least, it is proper, this Mr. Marcelle should acquaint me with his intentions," he was thinking, and then Janet slowly opened the door and advanced. There was a beautiful flush in her cheeks, and the delicate shade of her ciel-blue silk contrasted well with the pale roses in her hair.

"Do I disturb you?" she said timidly, "I feared perhaps you had forgotten—and as I am going to the opera with Mr. Marcelle, I thought I would remind you—it is just six months to-night—" And then Miss Lynde quite broke down and stood like a beautiful bashful girl, pulling her bouquet to pieces.

"Come here Janet," said her guardian
quietly, as he placed a chair beside him.

Censors of the Press.

What is to be done with this plan of making the collectors of customs censors of the Press and judges of what is obscene or the reverse? When is a book obscene? Smoltlett's works are pretty "high." So is Walt Whitman's "Leaves of Grass." So are Daudet's works and Zola's, and many others to say nothing of Pindar, and others of that stamp. Now these are openly sold in all our book stores and may be found, TRUTH suspects in Parliamentary Libraries at Ottawa, Quebec and possibly Toronto. How is that? It is worth while to be quite sure about not straining at a gnat and swallowing a camel. It is said that the number of obscene, or at least very high French novels
in the Parliamentary Library at Ottawa will be found very considerably large. How is that? Where are the censors? And why is the weeding out process not very strin-gently proceeded with? What about the nude statuettes of the female figure in the shop windows? TRUTH supposes that only prudes object to this sort of thing. Possibly.
Still nude women whether in paint or Parian don't help things greatly. Some are even old fogeyish enough to fancy that they do more harm than either Paine or Voltaire. If the latter are left alone, almost nobody either reads or knows anything about them.
It is quite otherwise when youths and maidens gaze with æsthetic and possibly lascivious eyes upon the suggestively nude figures which lovers of taste do worship.
However, it is very likely that fashion makes all the difference. But what is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander. If the one class is to be put down, the other ought not to go Scot free, still less be lauded to the skies.

Didn't Know Who it was.

The talk drifted from ships to boats, and an officer in the United States army attempted to enlighten the most modest looking man of the lot on rowing. He told him how to rig a boat, how to balance himself in a shell, and how to measure his stroke. Mr. Frank Mayo, who was in charge of the stranger, became silent, then amused, and finally exclaimed: "For God's sake, captain, hold on! You don't know who you are talking to."

"Well, I did a little rowing when a boy and ought to know something about boating," replied the captain, with a flush on his face.

"Well," said Mr. Mayo, "you are talking to Edward Hanlan."

The captain removed his hat, then extended his hand.

"Mr. Hanlan, I beg your pardon. I did not catch your name at first. If I had known, I should have taken to my boat and man who had won the prize he coveted. Yet he could not but acknowledge that this young Marcelle—whose attentions were so marked, that he, as her guardian, was constantly being asked when Miss Lynde was to be married—he could not but concede that this young gentleman was entirely suitable in age and fortune, and character. But it was none the less hard to bear for that reason, and Mr. Loring concealed his disappointment in an accession of unapproachableness, that was both alarming and inexplicable to Janet.

There was a light tap upon the library door, where Mr. Loring sat, ostensibly reading, but in reality speculating as to the chance of Miss Lynde's remembering a certain agreement, entered into between them six months before.

"At least, it is proper, this Mr. Marcelle should acquaint me with his intentions," he was thinking, and then Janet slowly opened the door and advanced. There was a beautiful flush in her cheeks, and the delicate shade of her ciel-blue silk contrasted well with the pale roses in her hair.

"Do I disturb you?" she said timidly, "I feared perhaps you had forgotten—and as I am going to the opera with Mr. Marcelle, I thought I would remind you—it is just six months to-night—"

And then Miss Lynde quite broke down and stood like a beautiful bashful girl, pulling her bouquet to pieces.

"Come here Janet," said her guardian quietly, as he placed a chair beside him. "Do you realize, my child, that I stand to you in a father's place? Tell me, Janet, is Mr. Marcelle the happy man, to whom I shall be asked to give you? I had hoped you would have given me your confidence, but I am aware there is nothing in my manner to call forth confidences," and Mr. Loring made a difficult effort to smile.

Janet had listened to this sufficiently long and measured speech, with a slowly deepening flush.

"How could you think it?" she asked with rapid utterance, and rather irrational indignation. "Why, Mr. Loring, he is hardly more than a boy. How could I respect a man who has no positive ideas of life, whose very ideas are unformed and of course it is impossible to love, if one does not respect—"

"Logical as ever, I see, Janet," said Mr. Loring, smiling quite easily this time.

"I may as well tell you, Mr. Loring," remarked Janet, with an air of injured dignity, "that it is Jessie Vinton whom Mr. Marcelle is anxious to marry, but that is not known just at present."

"Then Mr. Marcelle is disposed of, as far as I am concerned, Janet;" and, with great magnanimity, "he is certainly a very estimable young gentleman, from all I hear." Then more seriously: "And you have nothing further to confide in me? No advice to ask or favor to request?"

"None whatever, sir," Janet answered faintly.

"But Janet," he went on hurriedly, "you must not imagine that I am blind; quite unintentionally I have come across evidences that your heart is engaged—some verses, very pretty ones too, in a book you had been reading. You may rely upon my indulgence, child, and if your love is given to a man cap-

more harm than either Paine or Voltaire. If the latter are left alone, almost nobody either reads or knows anything about them. It is quite otherwise when youths and maidens gaze with æsthetic and possibly lascivious eyes upon the suggestively nude figures which lovers of taste do worship. However, it is very likely that fashion makes all the difference. But what is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander. If the one class is to be put down, the other ought not to go Scot free, still less be lauded to the skies.

Didn't Know Who it was.

The talk drifted from ships to boats, and an officer in the United States army attempted to enlighten the most modest looking man of the lot on rowing. He told him how to rig a boat, how to balance himself in a shell, and how to measure his stroke. Mr. Frank Mayo, who was in charge of the stranger, became silent, then amused, and finally, exclaimed: "For God's sake, captain, hold on! You don't know who you are talking to."

"Well, I did a little rowing when a boy and ought to know something about boating," replied the captain, with a flush on his face.

"Well," said Mr. Mayo, "you are talking to Edward Hanlan."

The captain removed his hat, then extended his hand.

"Mr. Hanlan, I beg your pardon. I did not catch your name at first. If I had stuck to my trade and talked army I should not have made a fool of myself. What shall it be? Yellow label?"

FASHION NOTES.

Fanchon bonnets will remain in vogue. Gray felt is the rage of the moment for hats and bonnets.

Sometimes a fresh trimming suffices to transform a dress.

Tiny checks are fashionable in both silk and woollen fabrics.

Combinations of stuffs are as popular for cloaks as for dresses.

Checked and brocaded fabrics are prettily combined with plain stuffs.

Imported hats and bonnets are noticeably larger than those of last fall.

Dark Russian furs—black fox, hare, otter and sable—will be much worn.

Capes or large collars are worn on tight walking jackets by young ladies.

New shoulder capes are cut to produce a full epaulette effect on the shoulders.

Hats have high crowns and small brims, or else moderate crowns and broad brims.

Ladies spend their spare change for fine glass ornaments this fall instead of bisque.

Many new felt hats are high crowned with narrow brims and the trimmings all on one side.

Egyptian red is the most lasting of all the æsthetic colors; it will be as popular as ever this winter.

The combination of velvet or velveteen with woollen fabrics grows in favor as the season advances.

Large bonnets are worn to excess on the other side, but American women will not give up the Fanchon.

Velvet epaulettes mounted on stiff muslin and wire appear on many handsome imported dinner costumes.

There is a tendency toward the revival of colored wraps for occasions of high ceremony and for carriage wear.

The most exclusive and fashionable dress-makers of Paris announce the arrival of the short waists of the first empire.

Salmon Canning.

The firms or individuals who own the salmon canneries not run on co-operative principles furnish to each fisherman his outfit and pay him a fixed price for each fish, deducting one-third of the market rate for the use of his outfit. A boat properly equipped for the season costs $750. This year the market price of salmon was ninety cents each, but a heavy run coming in, the price dropped as low as forty cents during the season. The price is fixed by mutual agreement, and partly owing to the wholesome influence of the co-operative concerns, the result arrived at is usually satisfactory all round. The fishermen are largely of foreign birth, Scandinavians, Italians, and Greeks being largely represented. Without Chinese labor, the canners say, the work could not be done, and Chinese fishermen are relied upon as being more steady than the proud Caucasians. As so large a number as 40,000 fish may be caught in a single day, at a market price not less than fifty cents each, one can readily see into what excesses the lucky

Hot Fomentations.

Hippocrates recommends these for the relief of chest, abdominal, and others pains. To the present time, hot fomentations have been the favorite remedy for a great variety of affections. If I were asked to select from all possible methods of treatment one, and one alone, with which I would undertake to combat human suffering, without a moment's hesitation I should select hot fomentations. For pains in the spine and shoulders, for pains in the head, for pains in the chest, stomach, and abdomen, for pains in the limbs, for pains in any and every part of the body, hot fomentations constitute the best and single remedy.

The old-fashioned method, with flannels wrung out of hot water, is a good one. A happy way of protecting the nurse's hands is to dip the flannel in boiling water; then lay it upon a towel, roll the towel and ring it.

The nurse who understands the hot-fomentation art, and applies it industriously, will often accomplish more than the doctor with all his drugs.

Recently, rubber bags have been devised, holding a gallon which, filled with hot water, constitutes a perfect way of applying heat to the body.—Dio Lewis.

Memory.

A man's memory is like his stomach. To do its best work it must have good treatment. It must neither be neglected nor overloaded. It can easily be so abused by neglect, or by irregular and unsystematic employment, as to become chiefly a cause of annoyance and discomfort; or, again, it can be so overworked and heavily taxed that it becomes practically the chief organ or agent of the entire system; every other portion dwindling in its comparison. The latter course is the great danger of those who value the help of a tenacious memory.

Both memory and stomach are valuable, not in proportion to the burdens they can carry, but in proportion to their training for their part in the work of the system as a whole; and either of them is made effective as much by what is kept from it, as by what is packed into it.—S. S. Times.

A Newsdealer's Wonderful Mustang.

Anderson Dadson has delivered newspapers through Pleasant Plains, Staten Island every morning for 12 years. He rides a thoroughbred Indian mustang. Three weeks ago Mr. Dadson was taken ill, and sent word to his customers that the horse would come round as usual, and asked the customers if they would go out and take the papers from the bundle in the horse's pack saddle. Every morning, it is averred, the mustang goes alone over the route, and in three weeks has only missed two of the fifty-four places his master stopped at.—New York Sun.

There are not many men who can celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of their first introduction to a pulpit. Dr. Irenaus Prime, editor of the N. Y. Observer, however, has just done so. Last Sunday he preached in the same Presbyterian church where, fifty years before, he had delivered his first sermon.

This terrible earthquake in Anatolia adds
one more to a fearful series of calamities, which has made 1883 a black year in the history of the nineteenth century at any rate, if not in that of the whole history of mankind. Thousands of people killed, thousands more utterly helpless. Desolation and destruction on every hand where only a few days ago peace and plenty reigned.
Scarcely has the mind recovered from the shock of hearing of one case of the kind when it is called on to face another equally appalling.

One hates to lend books, even to one's dearest friend, for never—that is to say very seldom—will he ever see them again. And even when they do find their way back,
they are generally soiled, written on or otherwise treated in a shameful way. No wonder then that people hate to lend books.
We never feel so like telling a lie as when some of our acquaintances ask for such and such a book, for it knows the next thing will be a request for the loan of it, and one likes almost as much to refuse as to lend.
But the cheek of some people in this respect is immense, it is past belief. Some books have actually been sold at auction of the household effects of some of our dear friends.
They had borrowed them, forgotten to return them, gradually came to regard them
as their own, and this was the result.

There is one man in town whom we certainly do not hate, and yet there is no one for whose company so little desire is felt. A correspondent puts it thus:—"I casians. As so large a number as 40,000 fish may be caught in a single day, at a market price not less than fifty cents each, one can readily see into what excesses the lucky fisherman may be tempted. The whisky shops of Astoria, On., are almost as many in number as the houses of legitimate business and residence. The Chinaman never gets drunk, never strikes for higher wages, and never hesitates to work extra hours when a great run of fish comes in. The white man is less trustworthy in these respects. The Chinamen, too, are very expert in handling the fish. The "slitter," as he is usually called, is usually a stalwart Chinaman who ranges

a long row of fish on the table before him, with the tails toward him. With a rapid movement he walks along the row, cutting off fins and tails as he moves. Then the fish are reversed, and, with equal celerity, he chops off each head with a single motion.
Then he slits the fish open and removes the entrails. It seems to an observer that there is a great waste here, as no serious attempt is made to utilize the offal, which is rich in oil and fertilizers. The average weight of the live salmon is thirty-two pounds each,
although fish weighing as high as eighty pounds have been caught. The dressed fish weighs just about one-half less than it does when caught.

The introduction of labor-saving machinery has greatly facilitated the operations of canning. Revolving knives cut the fish to the exact size of the cans into which they are to be packed, and an elaborate and ingenious machine fills each can as rapidly as sixty men could when working with their hands. Each can passes through many processes, the total number of handlings being about 200. And yet, so rapid is the labor and so abundant the supply of fish, that the canner is fairly satisfied if he can make a profit of ten cents per can.—*Correspondence

The Mormons are going to give trouble. The Governor of Utah reports to Washington that there is a conspiracy still going on to defeat all the laws of Congress, and to keep up the peculiar institution of the saints in full force. The Mormons are so strong and so thoroughly organized, that it will be a very difficult job to bring them into subjection. They have possession of a very difficult country, the militia raised within the territory can not be relied on to carry out the Governor's wishes or to support the Federal laws. In short, the trouble is so formidable and grows so rapidly, that the Governor asks for the despatch of Federal troops into the district. This, of course, is an extreme measure resorted to only on rare occasions and indicates the gravity of the situation. Though polygamy has long since been abolished by law, it still flourishes in fact and will not be given up without bloodshed. The most of people find one wife quite sufficient. Some are ill-natured enough to allege that they find even one too many. What anybody can do with a dozen is a mystery, according to Canadian ideas. But when it is borne in mind that a patriarchal Mormon makes his wives support, not only themselves and their children, but the great, much married husband as well, the wonder to a good degree ceases.

The head of this household is a particularly nice man, kind, generous, and considerate to his superiors, inferiors and equals. His wife is a helpmeet for him, nobody has a word to say against her. The law of kindness is on her lips and in her heart, she would not willingly say an unkind word or do an unkind act to a human being of any age or rank, yet what is the fact? That lady is on the continual hunt for servants, for her help come and go in regular succession like Banquo's ghost. The wages given are liberal to a proverb, the treatment these servants receive is all that could be desired and the work required at their hands is moderate in the extreme, and yet—and yet!—they are continually on the move, why? they are continually quarrelling among themselves and when they take offence like spoiled children, they go off at a tangent and in platoons. Now if these good people, the master and mistress, would only reduce their establishment, turn adrift the majority of their idle, good for nothing helps, do things altogether on a simpler and more modest style would they not be far happier and keep the few servants they would then need to employ much longer and much more comfortable? A member of the British House of Commons once said, "when at college and when I had the eighth part of the service of one man, I got some attention and considerable help, but now when I have 16 servants all to myself I get no attention at all. In fact I am the only servant in the whole establishment, they are all so busy quarrelling or fooling with one another that they have no time to give a thought to me." True as the Gospel. If a good many people would cut down their establishments one half and resolve that come what might they would be master and mistresses in their own houses, they would be far happier and get a great deal better and more willing service. The scale is generally something like this: one servant, a good deal of service; two, a great deal less; three, a source of unmitigated anxiety and worry; four, the cause of incipient despair; five, and upward, desolation and uproar.

Samuel Wilson of Washington County, Pennsylvania, has just picked the second crop of pears this season from a single tree.

A Bashish House in New York.

We paused before a gloomy-looking house, entered the gate, and passed up the steps. The windows were absolutely dark, and the entrance-way looked dirty and desolate. Four pulls at the bell, a pause, and one more pull were followed by a few moments' silence, broken suddenly by the sound of falling chain, rasping bolt, and the grinding of a key in the lock. The outer door was cautiously opened, and at a word from my companion we passed into the vestibule. The outer door was carefully closed by some one whom I could not distinguish in the utter darkness. A moment after the inner door was opened, and never shall I forget the impression produced by the sudden change from total darkness to the strange scene that met my eyes. The dark vestibule was the boundary line separating the cold, dreary streets and the ordinary world from a scene of Oriental magnificence.

A volume of heavily scented air, close upon the heels of which came a deadly and sickening odor, wholly unlike anything I had ever smelled, greeted my nostrils. A hall lamp of grotesque shape flooded the hall with a subdued violet light that filtered through crenated disks of some violet fabric hung below it. The walls and ceilings, if ever modern, were no longer so, for they were shut in and hung by festoons and plaits of heavy cloth fresh from eastern looms. Tassels of blue, green, yellow, red, and tinsel here and there peeped forth, matching the curious edging of variously colored bead-work that bordered each fold of drapery like a huge procession of luminous ants, and seemed to flow into little phosphorescent pools wherever the cloth was caught up. Queer figures and strange lettering, in the same work, were here and there disclosed upon the ceiling cloths.

Along one side of the hall, between two doors, were ranged huge tubs and pots of majolica-like ware and blue-necked Japanese vases, in which were plants, shrubs, and flowers of the most exquisite color and odor. Green vines clambered up the walls and across the ceiling, and catching their tendrils in the balustrades of the stairs (which were also of a curious design), threw down long sprays and heavy festoons of verdure.

As my companion, who had paused a moment to give me time to look about me, walked toward the far end of the hall, I followed him, and passed into a small room on the right, where, with the assistance of a colored servant, we exchanged our coats, hats, and shoes for others more in keeping with our surroundings. First a long plush gown, quilted with silk down the front, and irregularly ornamented in bead and braid with designs of serpents, flowers, crescents, and stars, was slipped on over the head. Next a tasselled smoking-cap was donned, and the feet incased in noiseless list slippers. In any other place or under any other circumstances I should have felt ridiculous in this costume, but so in keeping was it with all I had seen, and so thoroughly had I seemed to have left my every-day self in the dark vestibule, that I felt perfectly at home in my strange dress. We next crossed the hall to a smaller room, where a young

The New Silks.

Every little while there is an odd little announcement through the columns of fashion journals that plain black silk has reasserted its supremacy and acquired new and distinguished prestige. The assertion is made at regular intervals every year, and has been for twenty-five years past, and it is always funny, and simply means that the writer of the paragraph has obtained a new black silk dress and is bound to give it importance. Every good black silk always has a character and a standing of its own which is unaffected by the changes of fashion, but it addresses itself mainly to those who make no pretensions to fashion—elderly ladies and well-to-do women who want a solid dress which looks sufficiently handsome for all occasions and is not out of place upon any. To such persons no other fabric ever takes the place of a nice faille or gross-grained silk, and every lady, whatever her pretensions, likes one black silk in her wardrobe because of its convenience.

But of late there are new styles that dispute pre-eminence with old-time favorites—the black surahs, a soft, swilled silk with a satin finish, have established themselves in a place from which it will be very difficult to dislodge them. They are not high-class or remarkable silks in any way, but they are adaptable. They lend themselves to graceful arrangement, they are supple and youthful, which "rich" black silks of the gros-grain type are not, and they are not only durable but comparatively inexpensive. No wonder they are popular—no wonder they are in demand and have forced the New York manufacturer, John N. Stearns, to produce a "winter" surah of superior quality and finish in seventy-five different shades and colors, of which the wines, the garnets, and the new reds with a copper tint in them, promise to be the favorites for the present and coming season. The difficulty with the Ottoman silk is that it is less durable than silks less distinctively marked, but it is handsome and effective, and the late designs alternate with satin stripes, which are enclosed in lines of color, and combined with a plain Ottoman fabric.

But the brocaded silks and satins are best suited for a really elegant toilet, for the designs grow constantly more striking, more artistic, better contrasted, and more tastefully adapted for the purpose of display, without vulgarity or ostentation. The finest designs are large, and show conventionalized forms of fruits with leaves, or leaves and a flower. They are in solid colors, such as evening blue, pink, cream, white, and black, and they require but little addition—for the simpler the form in which they are made the better—but the little should, of course, be of the best quality. Much of the beauty of the design is derived from the contrast in texture, and the effects obtained from the combination of armure or Ottoman in the ground, with dull satin or amure leaves, and a veining which seems to be executed in embroidery stitch. The whole ensemble is very rich, and few will believe, when exhibited on the counters of leading dry goods stores, that they are of American (and New York) manufacture, the general impression in regard to American silks having been obtained from the spun silks.

FORTY BILLION GERMS

A Wonderful Theory that Concerns Welfare, Happiness and Life of Everyone.

In his quiet and cosy library at the close of a busy day sat a gentleman and he absorbed in a new book and a newspaper. Quickly glancing to his wife, she asked, at a certain point in the article,

"John, what is the germ theory?"

"The germ theory—well—yes; it's in the encyclopedia under 'Germ,' explain it so much better than I can."

Accordingly his wife opened the book and read: Germ Theory—A theory advanced by Pasteur and best investigators and scientists. It supposes the surface of the earth, the air and water to be inhabited to a greater or less extent with a peculiar form of life called fungi—commonly called bacteria, whose power of reproduction under favorable conditions, is so great that a single germ will increase to fifty million in twenty-four hours time, and under unfavorable conditions would grow to a mass of a hundred tons, in three days' time, and food be furnished. There is a theory under which it can be said to be unless it be from fire or air filtered through cotton-batting in numerous layers. A drop of water containing a germ, when put into water, boiled, filtered and then from bacteria, will grow murky in two from the development of new germs. When it is considered that it requires forty billion to weigh one grain, the germ idea can be had of the capacity for reproduction. Professor John T. Edgerly, in a late work, elaborately treats the influence of germs in the propagation of disease and charges upon this cause, the origin and development of very many ailments most injurious to man. Pasteur, an eminent French savant, has varied his original and beautiful experiments, and from them deduced such results as very greatly to diminish the number of cases of anthrax among cattle, chicken cholera among fowl,—the germ theory that these are essentially germ diseases. These germs are introduced into the system through the lungs, stomach and possibly the skin, but the lungs chiefly. Once in the system they begin to develop, poisoning the system, invading the nerve centres, disturbing the functional activity of the great organs of the body and inducing a general interference of the vital processes. They are the cause of fevers, rheumatism, Bright's disease, the kidneys, pneumonia, blood poisoning, liver disease, diphtheria and many other ailments. Lately Professor Koch, a German physician, has proved that the consumption of the lungs is due to the presence of a peculiar germ.

When the circulation is bound, the nerves elastic and the system full of life and energy, the germs seem to do poorly, if at all. But with weakened poor digestion or malassimilation of food or a lowering of vitality by any cause, a change ensues, and the impoverished and weakened fluid finds a genial home and develops u

In any other place or under any other circumstances I should have felt ridiculous in this costume, but so in keeping was it with all I had seen, and so thoroughly had I seemed to have left my every-day self in the dark vestibule, that I felt perfectly at home in my strange dress. We next crossed the hall to a smaller room, where a young man, apparently a Frenchman, furnished us on the payment of two dollars each, with two small pipes and a small covered bronze cup, or urn, filled with a green dry shrub, which I subsequently learned was gunjeh (the dried tops and leaves of the hemp plant), for smoking. My friend, on the payment of a further sum, obtained a curious little box which contained some small black lozenges, consisting of the resin of hemp, henbane, crushed datura seeds, butter, and honey, and known in India as Majoon, amongst the Moors as El Mogen.

Passing from this room we ascended the richly carpeted stairs, enarboled by vines, and paused upon a landing from which three doors opened. Upon one a pink card bore Dryden's line,

"Take the good the gods provide thee."
The nob turned by my friend's hand allowed the door to swing open, and, welcomed by a spice breeze from India, we were truly in paradise.

"This," he said in a whisper, "is the public room, where any one having pipe or lozenge, and properly attired, may enter and indulge—eat, smoke, or dream, as best suits him."

Wonder, amazement, admiration, but faintly portray my mental condition. Prepared by what I had already seen and experienced for something odd and Oriental, still the magnificence of what now met my gaze far surpassed anything I had ever dreamed of, and brought to my mind the scenes of the Arabian Nights, forgotten since boyhood until now. My every sense was irresistibly taken captive, and it was some moments before I could realize that I really was not the victim of some dream, for I seemed to have wholly severed my connection with the world of to-day, and to have stepped back several centuries into the times of genii, fairies and fountains—into the very heart of Persia or Arabia.

Not an inharmonious detail marred the symmetry of the whole. Beneath, my feet sank almost ankle-deep into a velvety carpet—a sea of subdued colors. Looked at closely, I found that the design was that of a garden; beds of luxurious flowers, stars and crescents, squares and diamond-shaped plots, made up of thousands of rare exotics and richly colored leaves. Here a brook, edged with damp verdure, from beneath which peeped coy violets and tiny bluebells; there a serpentine gravelled walk that wound in and out amongst the exquisite plants and everywhere a thousand shrubs

The whole ensemble is very rich, and few will believe, when exhibited on the counters of leading dry goods stores, that they are of American (and New York) manufacture, the general impression in regard to American silks having been obtained from the spun silks, which has a finish so much like the obsolete poplin.

Other novelties produced by our own manufacturers consists of stripes—"hair" stripes—in two colors, black and another, as, for example, black and mauve, black and electric blue, black and old gold, black and bronze, and many other combinations. Upon these are brocaded lower designs in a third color, which is in contrast to the ground tone, but produces no violent shock. On the contrary, the effect is rich, yet bright and cheerful, and seems to suggest them as suitable fabrics for dinner dresses or evening receptions at home. The richest among the stuffs intended for suits and costumes are very beautiful satin brocades in small figures, intended for combination with plain velvet or plain satin duchesse. The grounds are dark cloth shades, the figures look like jewels, are not only small, but in high colors—old gold, ruby, and amethyst—and would have the effect of embroidery upon satin, at a little distance. Sunset silk is a rich brocade in very handsome and effective patterns in white, with blue or pink color through it, which gives it an undescrivable glow—a sort of reflection of color, which is infinitely more delicate than color itself. All the new brocades have amure effects—those that are imported as well as those that are made here—and the figured plushes are re-appearing for cloaks, and combination with a new satin that is woven with a shorter loop than satin duchesse, and is, therefore, better adapted to give good wear, while it is equally thick and contains as much silk.

The tapestried silks are yet principally used for upholstery, but some ladies are beginning to combine them with velvet, and to use them for the fronts of "picture" dresses in conjunction with Watteau trains of dull, thick satin or velvet. The silver and gold brocades will doubtless constitute an important element this season, as last, in the construction of magnificent evening toilets—but these will occupy attention later on. At present it is the forehanded—those who have only one or two new silks of a season, and who know exactly what they want—who are providing them in advance of the gay season, while the majority are occupied in settling the present more important question of autumn cloth and woolen suits, deciding whether braiding is or is not to be, and how a cloth suit can best be made to look jaunty and becoming.

When the circulation is bound, nerves elastic and the system all as life and energy, the germs seem to grow poorly, if at all. But with weakened poor digestion or malassimilation of food or a lowering of vitality, any cause, a change ensues, and in impoverished and weakened fluid the germs find a genial home and develop in enormous numbers. This is seen in the everyday example of all. The healthy man resists the attack of germs around him and does not take cold, those whose systems have become weak from any cause readily contract cold, and is on the same principle as the germ. The germs attack any weakened system, and fixing themselves upon the system, their propagation. It is plain that it is only by fortifying the weak points of the body that the germs can be resisted and driven from the system. But this has proved almost an impossibility heretofore, and it has been the study of physicians for years how best to accomplish this. Within the past few years, however, a preparation has been attracting great attention not only throughout the entire world among the medical profession and the public generally, which is based upon the latest theory, and it may safely be said, no remedy has ever been discovered which can so successfully place the system in a condition to resist the germs of disease as Warner's Safe Cure. This article unquestionably the best and most effective remedy has ever been discovered for this disease.

"John, say, John! does the enclosed advertise Warner's Safe Cure?"

"I should not wonder, dear, if it did, remedy, and that pamphlet we received the other day stated that Dr. Gunn, of the United States Medical College, endorsed it. At all events the wonderful cures accomplished entitle it to be honored among the great discoveries of the century."

However the facts above stated the truth remains, that the germ of disease is the correct one and that the remedy mentioned is the only one ever been found that can put the system in a condition to kill these germs before they obtain a hold upon the body, and thus prevent the fever.

Above, a magnificent chandelier, consisting of six dragons of beaten gold, from whose eyes and throat sprang flames, the light from which, striking against a series of curiously set prisms, fell shattered and scintillating into a thousand glancing beams that illuminated every corner of the room. The rows of prisms being of clear and variously colored glass, and the dragons slowly revolving, a weird and ever-changing hue was given to every object in the room.

All about the sides of the spacious apartment, upon the floor, were mattresses covered with different colored cloth, and edged with heavy golden fringe. Upon them were carelessly strewn rugs and mats of Persian and Turkish handicraft, and soft pillows in heaps. Above the level of these divans there ran, all about the room, a series of huge mirrors framed with gilded serpents intercoiled, effectually shutting off the windows. The effect was magnificent. There seemed to be twenty rooms instead of one, and everywhere could be seen the flame-tongued and fiery-eyed dragons slowly revolving, giving to all the appearance of a magnificent kaleidoscope in which the harmonious colors were ever blending and constantly presenting new combinations.—*H. Where to see the Great Trotters of New York. (Cincinnati Times-Star.)

No two men in America have had more experience with fine trotting stock, and none are better judges than Calvin M. Priest, of the New York Club Stables, 28th street near Fifth avenue and Dan Mace, of the Excelsior Stables, West 29th street, New York, the champion double-team driver of the United States. Both of these gentlemen say, that for painful ailments in horses, such as cuts, bruises, swellings, lameness, stiffness, St. Jacobs Oil is superior to anything they have ever used or heard of. This is also the opinion of Prof. David Robarge, the celebrated horse-shoer of the metropolis, and thousands of stock-owners throughout the country. As a pain-cure for man and beast St. Jacobs Oil has no equal. Mr. Priest recites the case of a valuable trotter, so stiff from rheumatism, that he could not move an inch. By one thorough application of St. Jacobs Oil at night, the animal was completely cured, and was fit for the race-track the next day.

It was a thoroughly stirring address, and if these young fellows heard it don't try to do their duty. The might of brain and muscle will never overcome the might of a will. Heaven has endowed them, then, with the power of their advantages, and they must be hurried back into obscurity, with a sible speed.

The doctor is very indignant that should dare to allude to his college as "godless" place. Possibly the term may be a relic of a more liberal age, when outsiders could not so appreciate the beauties of morality religion combined, and matters were greatly improved since the Doctor got them in hand. Unless common sense, however, is a very liar, as in untruth as the Cretans and an ignorant prejudiced to boot, we very much doubt that the term "Godless" applied to the University College, could not be considered together a misnomer, and this not ago either.

That vulgar, stupid, but let rapidly expiring notion that education tends to unfit a man for the day humdrum duties of life, is a sturdy blow from the learned Doctor the thanks of the community are due for giving it. "John, what is the germ theory?"

"The germ theory—well—yes; just look in the encyclopedia under 'Germ,' that will explain it so much better than I can."

Accordingly his wife opened the book at the word named and read: Germ Theory of Disease—A theory advanced by the ablest and best investigators and scientists of the times. It supposes the surface of the earth, the air and water to be inhabited to a greater or less extent with a peculiar growth of the lowest form of fungi—commonly termed bacteria, whose power of reproduction, under favorable conditions, is so great that a single germ will increase to fifteen million in twenty-four hours time, and unchecked in its increase would grow to a mass of eight hundred tons, in three days' time, if space and food be furnished. There is no condition under which it can be said to be absent, unless it be from fire or air filtered through cotton-batting in numerous layers. A single drop of water containing a germ, put into water, boiled, filtered and thus freed from bacteria, will grow murky in a day or two from the development of new germs. When it is considered that it requires about forty billion to weigh one grain, some remote idea can be had of the capacity of germ reproduction. Professor John Tyndall, in a late work, elaborately treats of the influence of germs in the propagation of disease and charges upon this cause, the inception and development of very many of the ailments most injurious to man. Professor Pasteur, an eminent French savant, has carried his original and beautiful experiments so far, and from them deduced such practical results as very greatly to diminish the number of cases of anthrax among sheep and chicken cholera among fowl,—proving his theory that these are essentially and actually germ diseases. poor digestion or malassimilation of food or a lowering of vitality from any cause, a change ensues, and in this impoverished and weakened fluid the germ finds a genial home and develops until symptoms of disease are distinctly manifested.
This is seen in the everyday experience of
all. The healthy man resists the influences around him and does not take cold, while those whose systems have become weak from any cause readily contract colds. This is on the same principle as the germ theory.
The germs attack any weakened spot in the body, and fixing themselves upon it, begin their propagation. It is plain therefore that it is only by fortifying the weak portions of the body that the germs of disease
can be resisted and driven from the system.
But this has proved almost an impossibility heretofore, and it has been the study of physicians for years how best to accomplish it.
Within the past few years, however, a preparation has been attracting great attention, not only throughout the entire land, but among the medical profession and scientists generally, which is based upon this theory, and it may safely be said, no remedy has ever been found which can so successfully place the system
in a condition to resist the germs of disease as Warner's Safe Cure. This article is unquestionably the best and most efficient that has ever been discovered for this purpose, and—

"John, say, John! does the encyclopedia advertise Warner's Safe Cure?"

"I should not wonder, dear, it's a grand remedy, and that pamphlet we received the other day stated that Dr. Gunn, of the United States Medical College, endorsed it.
At all events the wonderful cures it is accomplishing entitle it to be honorably noted among the great discoveries of the present century."

However the facts above stated may be,
the truth remains, that the germ theory of disease is the correct one and that the great remedy mentioned is the only one which has ever been found that can put the system in a condition to kill these germs before they obtain a hold upon the body, and undermine the fe.

Dr. Wilson's Address.

No more inspiring address was ever given to students, or to any other body of young men or maidens, than that which Dr. Wilson gave at the University Convocation recently. It was a thoroughly stirring, manly address, and if these young fellows who heard it don't try to do their duty with all the might of brain and muscle with which Heaven has endowed them, then they are unworthy of their advantages, and should be hurried back into obscurity, with all possible speed.

The doctor is very indignant that anyone should dare to allude to his college as a "godless" place. Possibly enough the term may be a relic of a more barbarous age, when outsiders could not so well appreciate the beauties of morality and religion combined, and matters may have greatly improved since the Doctor took them in hand. Unless common report, however, is a very liar, as mighty in untruth as the Cretans of old, and an ignorant prejudiced numskull to boot, we very much fear that the term "Godless" applied to University College, could not be considered altogether a misnomer, and this not very long ago either.

That vulgar, stupid, but let us hope rapidly expiring notion that a liberal education tends to unfit a man for the every day humdrum duties of life, received a sturdy blow from the learned Doctor. And the thanks of the community are due to him for giving it. Manly words like these spoken from high places, will do much to drive such invertebrate callow notions as these into that limbo of vanities to which they properly belong.

The mere acquisition of so much knowledge possibly may, but education, a University education at that too, in the best sense of the word, never can make a man a worse farmer or a worse mechanic, any more than it can make a worse doctor, lawyer or minister. An acquaintance with mathematics and the languages, need never spoil a woman's housekeeping. Her pudding may be delicious, and her husband's

 Kidneys, Liver, and Urinary Organs.
 THE BEST BLOOD PURIFIER.

There is only one way by which any disease can be cured, and that is by removing the cause—wherever it may be. The great medical authorities of the day declare that nearly every disease is caused by deranged kidneys or liver.
 To restore these, therefore, is the only way by which health can be secured. Here is where WARNER'S SAFE CURE has achieved its great reputation. It acts directly upon the kidneys and liver, and by placing them in a healthy condition drives disease and pain from the system. For all Kidney, Liver, and Urinary troubles; for the distressing disorders of women; for Malaria, and physical troubles generally, this great remedy has no equal. Beware of impostors, imitations and concoctions said to be just as good.

Capt. Abbie is still quite ill but exceedingly hopeful. The breach in the ranks is about completely healed.

To Farmers.

There is now a large quantity of tiles in stock at the Stevenson mill yard. First come first served. F. W. MORRIS, agent.

Election Probabilities.

There can no longer be any doubt of an early election. When the gas lights illumined St. Mary Magdalene's church Sunday evening the portly figure of the ex-Boss was seen in one of the pews. Weather probabilities may fail, but this—never. The writ will soon be here.

Return of the Favorites.

Mr. Ogden Hinch, representing the Free Masons, and Mr. W. F. Hall, the C. M. church, have arranged for a concert by the Fisk Jubilee Singers in town on Tuesday evening, Nov. 20th. The return of these favorites will be welcomed by everybody and a crowded house is assured. Probably this may be the last opportunity our people will have of hearing this company as they leave in April for Europe. Full particulars will be given in due course.

Found Drowned.

Mr. William McCallum, carpenter, was found drowned in the river near the big mill yesterday morning by Mr. Louis Tisdale. The body was standing erect in 4 feet 8 inches of water. The unfortunate man had been seen Wednesday evening near the mill and it is supposed that he was walking on the beam which extends out over the river when he fell off and becoming rapidly chilled could not extricate himself. He leaves a wife and respectable family. An inquest was not deemed necessary.

United Methodist District Conference.

A meeting of all the ministers of the Methodist churches within the bounds of the Napanee district, with an equal number of laymen, will be held in Napanee, beginning on Tuesday evening, Nov. 13th. The meeting will be held for the purpose of readjusting the circuits on the district and preparing a plan to be submitted to the committee appointed by the General Conference which consists of the chairman and presiding elders on each district. Appropriate religious services will be held in connection with the convention. A full programme may be looked for in next week's issue.

Union Thanksgiving Service.

Next Thursday, Nov. 8th, having been appointed as a day of thanksgiving to be observed in all parts of the Dominion, it has been decided to hold a union service in the Methodist Church of Canada in this town. —Table linens, sheetings, towels, shirtings, to be sold at auction on Saturday night. J. F. McAlister & Co.

—Mails close at the Napanee post office as follows: Going East—11.45 p.m. and 9 p.m. Going West—4.15 p.m. and 9 p.m. Side mails at 1.45 p.m. on arrival of the train from the west. P. O. boxes collected at 11 a.m., 1 p.m. and 6.30 p.m.

—News has been received from the two hunting parties now in the north which indicates that both are meeting with excellent success. The Huffman-Lane party had 3 deer and the McDonald-Files had up to Saturday shot 5, one of which was sent to town this week.

—Another new time-table of the G. T. Railway came into effect last Monday. The only change is that the midday express train going east leaves Napanee at 12.20 instead of 1 o'clock. The lightning express train has been resumed, going east daily (Sundays excepted), passing Napanee at 12.45 p.m. It stops here only when on time.

—A slight misunderstanding over a couple of young girls caused four young men to indulge in the game of fisticuffs on Dundas-st., Sunday night. In the melee two panes of glass were broken—one in Hicks' store and the other in Scott's barber shop. The girls made good their escape in the meantime and left their pugilistically inclined swains to fight it out.

—A fracas took place on Sunday last in the rear of one of our town hotels. A dispute arose between a servant girl and the hostler and finally the girl threw a stick of wood at her opponent. He in return assaulted her. Just then the porter and one of the proprietors appeared on the scene and championed the girl. Result—porter and proprietors a black eye each and the hostler "cock of the roost."

—Mrs. James Burgess of Deseronto, (sister of Mr. G. E. Bogart, postmaster of Napanee), died very suddenly at Ganarogue on Wednesday, of paralysis. She was on a visit to her husband who is erecting the railway station at that place and had only arrived when she was seized with her fatal illness. Her sudden death has cast a gloom over the entire community where she was well known. The remains have been brought to Deseronto for interment.

—A partnership has been effected between Messrs. W. S. Williams and W. G. Wilson, for the practice of law. The firm will be known as Williams & Wilson. Mr. Williams has decided to give more attention in future to his profession, and assisted by Mr. Wilson, who is a rising young member of the bar, the large practice which he allowed to depart from him through his attention being attracted off in other channels will soon be restored. We wish the new firm success.

—Messrs. Stanley Mallory and Geo. Davis of Thompson's Point arrived home from the North-West last week after an absence of eight months. They were well pleased with the country. They visited all the principal towns in Manitoba and pronounce Brandon the finest located and growing the most rapidly of them all.

On Monday evening a tea-meeting will be held in the church at which addresses will be delivered by Revs. S. Card, G. Robinson and S. A. Durran. Music to suit the occasion. Single tickets, 10c.; lady and gentleman, 75c. A general invitation is extended the public to be present.

Railway Notes.

—The rails are laid beyond the boundary of Richmond. An engine and ten flat cars are at work.

—An order has been given the Kingston car works for a first-class car, baggage, post office and smoking cars.

—Mr. W. S. Williams, Secretary of the Company, was in Montreal on Wednesday on railway business. There are yet there some 900 tons of rails to be sent to Napanee.

—The Kingston car works have just completed an order for twelve cars for the Napanee & Tamworth road. The same were loaded with railway ties by the Rathbun Co. and despatched to Napanee.

—Messrs. E. W. Rathbun, W. R. Aylesworth and R. C. Carter went north yesterday to arrange for the sidings for the paper mills at Napanee Mills and Newburgh, and for station grounds at Yarker.

A Sterling Reformer.

Samuel D. Farley, Esq., of Belleville, is now on a visit to his nephew, Mr. T. W. Casey of Picty Hill. Mr. Farley is one of the old standard bearers of the Reform party in Hastings County. He recorded his first vote for Robert Baldwin in the election of 1839 and he has voted at every election in the county from that day to this, never failing to give his vote and influence for the Reform party. Mr. Farley may well be proud of such a life-long political record. We believe he has good reason to become more thoroughly convinced, with increased experience, of the great blessing conferred on the great body politic of Canada by the hard fought battles of the time-honored Reformers for the rights and liberties and equal freedom to all now enjoyed by the people of Canada. There have been many times during the past forty years when it required a good deal of both moral and physical courage to be a prominent advocate of the principles of the Reform party, and it required the spirit of a true patriot to do so; but where would have been the political rights and liberties we now enjoy but for the struggles of these heroic men?

Sunday morning knee drill and conference meeting well attended by soldiers. A hymn was sung in prayer and testimony meeting. Large number at the close of the meeting the C. M. Church to attend divine service they listened to a very eloquent sermon by M. L. Pearson. He took for his text the 8th of Matthew—"Blessed are the poor for they shall see God." May all who hear it take it deeply to heart and profit the good turn out of soldiers in the evening at the C. M. Church, where Rev. Mr. Card preached a powerful sermon on the seven evidences version. He based his discourse on the 1st of the 3rd chapter of the 1st epistle of John. He felt that God had blessed us, and we were to the hall, which was filled to overflowing. We expected to see a large number surround our King, but they held out firm. After heavy firing the day's fighting ceased, and a large number wounded, some have since died, Lieut. Willis (God bless him) had both engagements on the same day and a braver soldier never wielded the sword than the Spirit.

Tuesday night.—Grand rally; large attendance. Rev. Mr. Young was present and cheered soldiers on to battle in a very able address was listened to with rapt attention. It seldom been our lot to listen to an able speaker. We hope to see and hear Mr. Young in the future. After an hour's heavy shooting took place in the front ranks and several others out the field fell from stray shot.

Though Wednesday night had other attractions for the people, yet we had a good attendance and a good time. There was a killed in this engagement, but the list of the dead was quite heavy.

THURSDAY NIGHT NOTES.

Our meeting to-night was a real Hallelujah. There was a large attendance of soldiers, felt that God had blessed them, and so or seventy testified to what the Lord had done for them, and they were testimonies that could reject. They came from the battalions those who look to the world for pleasure but enjoy the love of the Lord Jesus for they would look for no other pleasure. Lindsay made a short address, which the soldiers' hearts. God is owning and the work all over. It is the intention to the work further west in a short time. I give a list of the officers as they now stand: Major—W. R. Moore; Captain—John Lieut.—Nellie Willis; Treas.—Chas. Sec.—Thos. J. O'Neil; Sergeants—Jas. James Minchinton, Jas. Sanderson, W. Robert Baldwin, Fannie Inley; Corporals—Harris, Corporal Frank Detlor, at Picton, has been promoted to the rank of sergeant.

FIELD NOTES.

Y. P. M. & L. S.

A meeting of the Young People's Musical and Literary Society was held last Friday evening. After the opening exercises the election of officers was proceeded with. The following officers were elected for the ensuing term:-

President—Rev. M. L. Pearson.
1st Vice-President—Mr. H. C. Parks.
2nd Vice-President—Miss Williams.
Secretary—Mr. D. E. Fralick.
Treasurer—Mr. Denis Daly.
Committee of Management—The officers and Messrs. Steward Daly, W. S. Williams, M. B. Mills, Miss Casey, Miss Helen Grange and Miss Nellie Wilson.

The Society will meet every Friday evening in the lecture room of the C. M. Church. A good programme will be provided at each meeting.

A New Vessel for the Bay of Quinte.

A new passenger boat is being built at Kingston for the river and Bay of Quinte route, and will be put on at the opening of navigation in the spring. Capt. R. Davis is superintending the work and expects to turn out a craft that will outstrip anything on the Bay. Nothing but the best material will be used in the construction of the boat. She will carry between 300 and 400 passengers, and her dimensions are—82 feet long, 17 feet beam, 6 feet depth of hold, 12 1/2 cylinder, steel boilers, 4 1/2 ft. screw, and will draw 4 1/2 feet of water light. Messrs. Davis & Doran, of Kingston, are manufacturing the machinery. The vessel will be built entirely of white oak. She is to run from 14 to 15 miles an hour, and will make two trips per day from Napanee to Picton and Bay ports. The cost will be about $8,000. She will be first-class in every respect. The company who will own and control the boat is composed of Messrs. D. W. Allison, Capt. Collier, Chas. J. Curlette and A. H. Allison, each holding a quarter interest. The framework of the boat is all up, and she will be completed during the winter.

The Fall Assizes.

The fall assizes open at the Court House on Monday next before Mr. Justice Burton. Mr. R. C. Clute, of Belleville, will conduct the Crown business, which is very small, there being only two or three cases. The following is a list of the cases so far entered:

JURY CASES.

1. Amey vs. G. T. R. R.—Action for damages by fire. E. J. Hooper for plaintiffs; John Bell, Q.C., for defendants.
2. Herring vs. Wilson.—Action for back rent on Brisco House. Deroche & Madden for plaintiffs; John A. Wright for defendant.
3. Hayes vs. Sampson.—Action for seduction. E. J. Hooper for plaintiff; Deroche & Madden for defendant.
4. Osterhout vs. Carscallen.—Action for damages for false imprisonment. E. J. Hooper for plaintiff; Deroche & Madden for defendant.
5. Roe vs. Snider.—Action for slander. E. J. Hooper for plaintiff; A. L. Morden for defendant.
6. Merchants' Bank vs. Elliott, et al.—Action on promissory note for $17,000 given by defendants as officers of the Brush Co. A. L. Morden for plaintiffs; S. B. Burdett for defendant Elliott, Geo. D. Dickson for defendant Preston, and A. B. Aylsworth and Deroche & Madden for defendant Russell.
7. Macdonald vs. Hillier.—D. H. Preston for plaintiff; Britton & Whiting for defendant.

NON-JURY CASES.

1. Phillips vs. Stone.—G. D. Dickson for plaintiff; S. Mason for defendant.
2. Gibson vs. Gillespie.—E. McMahon for plaintiff; Allison & Alcorn for defendant.
3. Bouch vs. Armstrong.—E. J. Hooper for —Belleville Council have agreed to sell the island in the mouth of the harbor to Rathbun & Son for $2,750.

—Lieut. Wood, of the Salvation Army, Belleville, has been transferred to Ingersoll. She is a very pathetic speaker and an excellent singer.

—Burglars Tuesday night entered the residence of Major Gillum, in Sidney, three miles west of Belleville, and stole a quantity of silver and plated ware.

—About a dozen persons at the Mississippi who, after eating of canned lobster and salmon, became seriously ill. There is no doubt that they ate of some poisonous substance.

—Francis Rickard, of Kingston, who was in the American army, has established a claim to a pension and recovered $861 back pay. He will be entitled to periodical remittances in future.

—Mr. R. McCay has sold his house and lot on Bridge-st. to Dr. Grange for $2,000. The Dr. will occupy it himself. Mr. McCay is moving into the brick house on Dundas-st. opposite Mr. Light's, owned by Sir R. J. Cartwright.

—Dr. Wilson, canon of St. George's cathedral Kingston, is mentioned as the probable successor of Dean Baldwin in the rectory of Christ Church, Montreal. For seventeen years Dr. Wilson has been located in Kingston.

Many a dollar is paid for prescriptions for some disease that never troubled the patient, and when the sole difficulty was worms, which a few of Freeman's Worm Powders would remove. These Powders are pleasant, safe, and sure, contain their own cathartic, and are adapted for children or adults.

—Wednesday morning Judge Lazier, senior judge of Hastings County, was united in matrimony to a "fair lady" with whom His Honor had the good fortune to meet at Clifton Springs, N. Y. The wedding took place at Clifton Springs. The bride is Miss Henckell, daughter of Rev. J. Henckell, D. D., an Episcopal clergyman, of Charlottesville, Virginia. Mr. Alex. Robertson, M. P., acted in the capacity of best man, and the bride was given away by her father.

A. Chard, of Sterling, testifies to the efficacy of Hagyard's Yellow Oil, which he used for a badly injured knee joint. It is the great household remedy for inflammation, pain, soreness, lameness, etc., and is used both internally and externally with infallible success.

—A young lady named Stevens, residing at Delta, sued a man named Darling, of Landsdowne, for breach of promise. Damages were set down at $5,000. The gentleman who had been keeping her company married another lady, and the plaintiff's friends claim that the action was brought as a vindication of the young lady's name which they claim was maligned by the defendant. At the Brockville Assizes the case was settled by the payment of $300 and the costs, which totalled nearly $200.

A Youthful Tourist.

Sunday last was the tenth birth-day of Master Russell Lawless, son of Mr. — Lawless, editor of the Standard, and the little fellow received some presents in cash. Feeling rich, next morning, instead of going to school, as his parents supposed, he started out to see the world. He took the York Road to Kingston, which place he reached about seven o'clock in the evening, having stopped at Odessa for dinner. When in quest of his supper in Kingston he fell in with a night-watchman, who, learning of his adventure, took him to police headquarters, where he was well cared for during the night. In the meantime the parents were very much concerned for his safety. When he did not return from school at noon, they made search for him, and learning that he had not been at school in the morning, they feared that he had met with an accident.
 They made search in every direction but no tidings were received until evening, when they learned he had gone to Kingston. Mr.
 Lawless went to Kingston on Tuesday and brought the little fellow home. He is a bright, intelligent, well behaved boy. His escapade arose from a desire to see the world. He told the police officer at Kingston that he saw all he wanted of the country and was willing to return home.

able crowding to get all the goods in one shop, no offer will be refused for any line to clear.

Our Millinery Department must be condensed to make room for other goods. We will sell Plumes, Feathers, Birds, Ornaments, trimmed and untrimmed Millinery at any price to get rid of them.

We have only two months, in which to clear out our large stock, but we have made up our minds to accomplish the task.

We cordially invite all in want of cheap, seasonable, and reliable goods to assist us in the undertaking.

Remember the opportunity will not be repeated and the time is limited.
